Roosevelt Order Remonetizes Silver in U. S.

SEE HUEY LONG PROSECUTION ON U. S. TAX CHARGE

Report He Failed to List Fees.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 21.—[Special.]—Huey P. [call me Kingfish] Long is tottering on his throne in the bayous of Louisiana tonight as calamity after calamity piles up to plague him.

What may be the last blow that will send the Kingfish to his long delayed oblivion has been struck by President Roosevelt.

It was learned today that the Roosevelt administration has at last moved toward the prosecution of the Louisiana connoisseur of pot likker and corn pone on oft repeated charges that he had received many thousands of dollars in various "fees," both as governor of Louisiana and as United States senator, and that he neglected to report these sums in his income tax schedules.

Followers Are Deserting.

Topping the news of numerous desertions by the Kingfish's political henchmen in Louisiana, who are described as eager to hasten an early dethronement, the story that "F. D." had put the presidential okay on the presentation of the income tax evasion charges set commentators busy in preparing a political epitaph for Mr. Long.

Mr. Long used to refer to Mr. Roosevelt as "the best President we ever had," and in his visits to the Roosevelt country home at Krum Elbow on the Hudson and to the White House Mr. Long had waxed very enthusiastic about the New Deal.

But when the President didn't order an immediate redistribution of wealth, along the lines of Mr. Long's senatorial perorations, the man from the bayous began to cool in his ardor and when the political impresario of the administration, Mr. Farley, began to slip important state patronage to Mr. Long's enemies Mr. Long took to making speeches against the New Deal.

Attacks Not Relished.

Time went on, however, without Mr. Roosevelt taking any retaliatory measures, although it was well known that the President did not relish the attacks which came from one of his former supporters.

But the President may have reflected on the impression which Senator Long made upon his mother, the Chatelaine of Hyde Park, upon the occasion of the senator's visit to that Hudson river estate.

The senior Mrs. Roosevelt, it has been learned, expressed at the dinner table her opinion of Mr. Long and of Mr. Long's political philosophy in tones so loud that it seemed impossible that the senator had not heard.

At that time, which was during the interim between his election and the inauguration, Mr. Roosevelt felt that Mr. Long was a sort of well meaning fellow and that he could be handled with a bit of tact and diplomacy.

Indictment May Come.

But now it appears that the President has accepted his patrician mother's verdict and Mr. Long is facing indictment on charges of income tax frauds.

It has not been stated that Mr. Roosevelt ordered the inquiry to be resumed, nor even that his new and energetic acting secretary of the treasury, Henry Morgenthau Jr., revived the investigation, but it is deemed unconscionable here that a prosecution of a United States senator, even Huey Long, should be recommended without the approval of both the acting secretary and the President.

It was learned that special agents of the bureau of internal revenue, under A. D. Burford, who directed the past investigations into the Long income tax schedules, have been in New Orleans for the last fortnight. They are bringing up to date a great grist of evidence collected in the last two years.

The first action against Senator Long was taken in the regime of former President Hoover, who had long been vexed by the senator's attacks on him, on the Republican party, and on many things in general.

According to reports broadcast freely during the fall of 1932, and right on up to the presidential election in November, the case had been worked 24 Million Ounces to Be Accepted.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 21.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt tonight ordered the remonetization and large scale coinage of silver in the United States for the first time since the world war.

In an executive order issued under the authority of the inflation amendment to the farm adjustment act the President directed all the federal mints in the country to accept for coinage all silver which is mined hereafter in the United States or its possessions.

President Roosevelt proclaimed also a price of 64½ cents an ounce for the silver which the mints accept. Since the annual silver production of the United States is about 24,000,000 ounces and since the United States is bound by the silver treaty negotiated at the London economic conference last summer to buy at least 24,421,410 ounces of domestic silver, the program will cost the treasury at least 15½ million dollars.

Government Keeps Half.

Half of the silver brought to government mints shall be retained by the government to cover seigniorage and all service charges, President Roosevelt directed. The other half will be coined into standard silver dollars and returned to the owner in payment for his metal.

In setting a price of 64½ cents an ounce for silver, a quotation which is about 21 cents above that currently prevailing in silver markets, President Roosevelt automatically put the ratio between silver and gold, which is selling for $34.06 an ounce in America, at 52 to 1.

The White House explained, however, that the legal price for government purchases of silver continued to be $1.29 an ounce, which, on the basis of the gold standard value for gold, would leave the ratio between gold and silver at 16 to 1, and President Roosevelt in his proclamation specifically declared that this legal ratio shall remain unchanged for the time being.

Power Conveyed in Farm Act.

Power to set a current quotation for silver and to determine the ratio between it and the gold was given to the President by the inflation amendment to the farm act.

The President's surprise move, bringing silver back into the coinage system of the United States, climaxed a long period in which pressure had been constantly directed upon him by the western silver states and their congressional representatives. Since the government began raising the price of gold, the ratio of silver to it has lagged farther and farther behind.

In addition Prof. George F. Warren, the President's present adviser on monetary matters, has constantly urged that when the dollar is put back on a metallic base its reserves be made up of both gold and silver. This position has been taken also by western senators and organized groups of business men backing the gold buying experiment.

Building Up Stocks of Silver.

Some quarters here tonight accepted the government buying of silver as a move toward building up stocks of silver which will be adequate to act as backing for the dollar, together with gold, when the dollar is stabilized again.

Both in his proclamation and in an accompanying statement the President, however, declared that the move was made to enhance domestic prices and protect American commerce against debased foreign currencies. These were the grounds on which he is permitted under the inflationary amendment to remonetize silver.

Immediate cause for the remonetization, however, was the London economic conference treaty on silver, which President Roosevelt declared today to be ratified by the United States. Power to ratify the treaty by proclamation, the President claimed, was clearly vested in him by the inflation amendment.

Explaining the obligation of remonetization which the London treaty lays upon the United States, the President said:

"It will be remembered that at the London conference 66 governments

DR. G. P. MARQUIS IS DEAD AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Dr. George Paull Marquis, noted ear nose, and throat specialist, died in his apartment at 900 North Michigan avenue shortly after midnight after an illness of more than [illegible] years. He had practiced in Chicago more than forty years.

Dr. Marquis was 65 years old. After receiving his medical degree at Northwestern university he pursued postgraduate studies in Berlin and Vienna. In recent years he had been attending nose specialist at St. Luke's hospital. Earlier he had served on the staffs of the county hospital and St. Joseph's and Columbus Memorial hospitals. He was chief surgeon of the 2d Illinois volunteers in the Spanish-American war and saw service in Cuba.

Dr. Marquis was a fellow of the American College of Surgeons and of numerous medical societies. He also was a member of the University, Old Elm, and Saddle and Cycle clubs.

Dr. Marquis was the father of Mrs. Arthur Dixon. His wife, the former Miss Emily Chamberlain of Philadelphia, died ten years ago.

The funeral services will be announced later.

ST. LOUIS LEADER AND WIFE SHOT TO DEATH IN HOLDUP

St. Louis, Dec. 22 [Friday.]—(AP)—Charles J. Abeln, 42 years old, president of a company operating a chain of cigar stores, and his wife, Anna, 39, were slain early today by a robber who sought to hold them up.

A police car in the vicinity of the slaying, which occurred in front of one of Abeln's stores in South Broadway, pursued the slayer's automobile for several blocks before losing the trail. Policemen fired several shots, none of which took effect.

Abeln, president and treasurer of Abeln Bros. Cigar and Tobacco company, was active in Republican politics, and in the latest municipal campaign was mentioned as a potential candidate for mayor.

In 1923 Abeln and his brother, Harry Abeln, shot and killed Charles Crowe, 22, identified by police as a "Cuckoo" gangster, when he attempted to hold them up.

Eastman Asks Public to Tell Its Rail Needs

Joseph B. Eastman, federal coördinator of transportation, is allowing the traveling public to vote on the changes it wants in American facilities for getting from place to place.

In the last ten days Mr. Eastman has distributed all over the country a questionnaire booklet on passenger trains, with the request that every person receiving a copy fill out the answer blanks and mail the filled booklet to Washington. A frank is provided so that no postage is required.

It was clearly indicated in a foreword that the travelers' answers will constitute a referendum and that the combined expression of opinion will be given important consideration in any changes that are made in the railroad systems.

Some of the Questions.

Among the questions asked are:

1. How many automobiles do you own? How many miles a year is your car driven?

2. How much do you estimate it costs you per mile to drive your car? What do you estimate is the actual out-of-pocket cost per mile?

3. Have you traveled in Europe?

4. Please estimate, for the year Oct. 1, 1932, to Oct. 1, 1933, the miles you traveled by railroad, bus, airplane, lake, or coastal steamer?

5. If you have not traveled by train during the period indicated above, please state in years how long it has been since you rode on a train?

6. What basic fare per mile would cause you to travel to the extent that you would spend more money for rail transportation than you do at present?

7. To what extent would this fare increase your present train travel in a year's time?

Takes Up Family Discount.

8. Would the rail travel of yourself and your family be increased if railroads gave a discount for family or other groups who travel as a party?

9. Would lower Pullman fares increase your use of train service?

10. Would you patronize railroad trains for one day trips to nearby resorts, picnic grounds, or sport centers if low Sunday and holiday rates were provided?

11. Have you found it difficult and confusing to obtain information regarding railway excursions?

12. Are railroad sales representatives as competent, and do they present their service as well, as the representatives of air lines or bus lines?

13. Are railroad sales representatives generally as competent as automobile salesmen?

14. Do they show a general need for better training in salesmanship?

Seeks Best Advertiser.

15. Which of the following services do you think does the best job of advertising: air lines, bus lines, or rail lines?

16. Is the advertising of railroad passenger service as effective and attractive as the advertising of automobile manufacturers.

17. Is it as effective and does it attract your attention as frequently as the Bell Telephone company's newspaper and magazine advertising?

The questionnaire filler is requested to state whether he believes rail tickets should be delivered to the buyer, whether the train calling should be more intelligible and time tables more simplified. Their ideas about the most comfortable seats, the abolition of tipping on trains and the easier opening of doors are sought.

A considerable list of questions has to do with the possible improvement of dining car service. Another list has to do with the best train speeds.

Spain May Ask U. S. to Land Troops in Cuba

BY JAY ALLEN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, Dec. 21.—The Spanish cabinet will deal tomorrow with the situation in Cuba where four Spanish subjects met death in disturbances yesterday. It is expected that Spain will overcome her intense dislike for asking American intervention in her former colony and indicate that the United States would only be fulfilling its treaty obligations if the American republic sends ships and troops to restore order.

This was the opinion expressed at a late hour tonight by a cabinet personality. He described the situation as "really alarming" and said "energetic measures are imperative."

Cabinet Has Studied Matter.

He revealed that the matter already had been dealt with in Monday's cabinet meeting and declared that there is "no other remedy possible now than American intervention."

Although Washington has expressed its opposition to intervention, it seems likely that Spain would favor such a procedure which, however, could only be adopted under very grave circumstances because Spain, for trade and sentimental reasons, naturally is loath to advise such a course.

It is possible that even now some measure such as a hasty reunion of diplomatic representatives in Cuba might be adopted. These diplomatic representatives would suggest the action believed most suitable and which probably would result in a request for American intervention. This would obviate direct Spanish interference.

U. S. Official Silent.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 21.—(AP)—Acting Secretary William Phillips of the state department declined to make any comment tonight on dispatches from Madrid saying that the Spanish cabinet had discussed the question of asking the United States to intervene in Cuba to protect Spaniards there.

This government has maintained a steadfast policy of nonintervention in Cuba throughout the recent troubles there and every indication has been that it will adhere rigidly to this policy.

Some observers held the view tonight that a Spanish request for intervention would place the United States in an embarrassing position, inasmuch as Secretary Hull this week at Montevideo virtually promised that the United States would not intervene in her neighbors' affairs during the life of the Roosevelt administration.

PARADE FOR GRAU

BY GUSTAVO RENO.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Cuba, Dec. 21.—Under the slogan "Cuba for Cubans alone" 50,000 demonstrators paraded in front of the United States embassy this afternoon in an effort to convince Jefferson Caffery, President Roosevelt's personal representative, that the majority of Cubans support the revolutionary régime. Then they marched to the presidential palace to be reviewed by President Ramon Grau San Martin and Col. Fulgencio Batista, head of the army.

Assembling in Fraternity square, the demonstrators, who were also boosting the law requiring the employment of at least 50 per cent Cuban labor, marched down the Prado, past the palace and Central park, and to the embassy. Caffery witnessed the parade from a balcony and waved to the marchers.

President Grau and Col. Batista spoke to the throng. They stressed what Grau called "the numerous benefits already accrued to the nation under the authentic revolutionary government." The Cubans were urged to support Grau solidly until May 20, 1934, when Grau said his entire government will resign.

ROBBERS KILLED IN GUN BATTLE IN ROGERS PARK

Hunt for Dillinger Takes 3 Others.

Three gunmen, two of them jailbreakers and alleged bank robbers and the third an ex-convict, were shot to death by policemen last night in a thrilling raid on an apartment at 1428 Farwell avenue, in the Rogers Park district. No policemen were wounded.

The raid was made in the belief that John Dillinger and members of his gang of escaped Indiana convicts would be found in the apartment. This gang has been blamed for several recent crimes in Chicago and its suburbs, including the murder on Dec. 14 of Police Sergeant William T. Shanley.

For nearly three hours after the three hoodlums had been killed it was thought by Deputy Chief of Detectives William V. Blaul that they were Dillinger and two members of his gang, Harry Pierpont and Jack Hamilton, the latter Shanley's slayer.

Identified by Fingerprints.

Fingerprint comparisons, however, established the identities of the dead men as follows:

LOUIS KATZEWITZ, 28 years old, one time inmate of Pontiac reformatory, jailbreaker and fugitive on a bank robbery charge.

CHARLES TATTLEBAUM, 30 years old, alias Chuck Tilden, like Katzewitz a fugitive and jailbreaker.

SAM GINSBURG, 33 years old, alias Harry Marks, paroled from the prison at Jackson, Mich., in 1927, after serving five years on a Detroit robbery charge. Known also as Green, he was said to own a cigar store at 109 North Wells street.

Katzewitz and Tattlebaum had been sought since June 15, 1932, when they and another man, awaiting trial for the holdup of the Union National bank of Streator, escaped from the La Salle county jail at Ottawa. The bank robbery netted the bandits $52,000. Their escape from the Ottawa jail was a daring one, engineered by five friends from Chicago who slipped a gun through the bars to Katzewitz.

Raid Directed by Stege.

The raid last night was directed by Supervising Capt. John Stege, who last Saturday was appointed head of a special detail of 40 men with instructions to round up the Dillinger gang and other desperadoes.

Although the police were disappointed that the three slain men were not the widely sought Dillinger and his confederates, they were convinced that they had erased a desperate gang. It is believed the men may have been the ones who on July 22 shot and killed Policemen Elmer Ostling and John Skopek in front of 2838 Washington boulevard, and some months ago figured in a $100,000 express robbery in St. Paul. That they were tough, was indicated by a search of their apartment.

In the apartment the raiders found five Lueger pistols, one repeating rifle, one shotgun, two snub nosed revolvers, two shoulder rests for submachine guns, two bullet proof vests, and 1,000 rounds of ammunition.

Man and Three Women Seized.

Early this morning police went to an apartment at 1424 Farwell avenue, in the same building where the battle occurred, and arrested Mrs. Harriet Marmer and her brother, Leonard Prizament, 1532 South Sawyer avenue. The apartment where the hoodlums were slain is leased to Mrs. Marmer and her husband, Robert. He is being sought. During the night detectives seized two women when they called at the Marmer place after the shooting. They said they were Mrs. Jeanette Lenobel, sister of Mrs. Marmer, and Mrs. Lucille Scher McHanigan, a friend.

Late yesterday Capt. Stege received secret information from a woman that part of the Dillinger gang would be found at the Farwell avenue apartment. Accordingly he made his plans. He gathered nineteen of his men and after dark met them about a mile away from the gang hideout. Then a little after 9 o'clock Stege and his squads went to the apartment building and surrounded as well as they could a first floor apartment in the northwest corner.

To his squad leaders Capt. Stege made a brief talk.

"To the best of our information, the men inside are members of the Dillinger crowd," he said. "They are good shots. But they must be taken."

In another few moments the captain had his men at their stations. Sergt. John Daly, and Detective Tom Stapleton, and Walter Ferguson went to the rear of the apartment. They carried a submachine gun and with this covered the back door and two rear windows.

Capt. Stege and Sergts. Frank Reynolds, Harry Newman, and Harry Bingham remained in front with a number of their men, some of them standing just under the front windows of the apartment. Sergt. James Shields and half a dozen men moved into the vestibule.

Forces Open Door to Stairs.

One of the policemen forced open the door to stairs that led to the apartment. This done, Sergt. Reynolds, Detective Jack Dawe, Capt. Stege and several other men crept up the stairs. Meanwhile, after a moment's wait, one of the policemen left in the vestibule pressed the call button of the apartment designated for the raid.

Cautiously the door to the apartment wa.. opened. Some one peered out and asked gruffly; "Who's there?" Sergt. Reynolds leaped forward.

"We're police officers," he shouted. "Surrender."

Instead of surrendering, the man at the door fired one shot at Reynolds. The sergeant was too far to one side, however, to be hamned by the bullet. The man fired two more shots. These missed Detective Dawe by inches.

Reynolds Shoots Gunman.

Those were the last shots fired by the gunman. Reynolds forced his way into the apartment, pushing the outlaw back. Then in the same movement, the sergeant lifted his gun and dropped his foe with two shots in the head.

Reynolds pushed on in, followed by Capt. Stege, Dawe and several other detectives. In the living room, to the left stood another hoodlum, two guns in his hands. He blazed away blindly at Reynolds, Capt. Stege and the policemen who stormed in after them. His aim was too high. Reynolds disposed of him quickly, with one shot in the chest. At the same time Capt. Stege and Dawe riddled him with bullets.

There was one more suspect left. He backed into the kitchenette, firing as he retreated. In a group, Capt. Stege, Reynolds, and the others swooped upon him shooting, just as Sergt. Daly, breaking in through a rear door, cut off his escape.

The man fell wounded, gun still in hand. With the last ounce of his strength he raised his pistol and pointed it at Daly. Daly kicked the gun to one side and fired a bullet into the hoodlum's head. This bullet killed him.

44 Shots Fired in Battle.

Forty-four shots in all were fired, according to Capt. Stege. This was determined by examining the guns of the policemen and the hoodlums. Stege said that the gunmen fired 24 shots and the policemen 20. Riddled with bullets, each dead man lay where he had fallen. Ginsburg, the man who opened the door and started the battle, lay on the threshold. Tattlebaum was crumpled beside a settee in the living room. Katzewitz, who made the last stand, lay in the kitchen.

The men's bodies were taken to the county morgue where an inquest will be held at 11 o'clock this morning. Medical examination showed that Ginsburg had been shot in the head, twice in the left side, and once in the left arm and once in the back. Tattlebaum was shot once in the left chest, twice in the left arm and side, and twice in the left shoulder. Katzewitz was struck twice in the stomach, once in the left side, once in the back, and once below the left ear.

Women's Clothes i Rooms.

Feminine apparel was strewn around the rooms. The police also found five women's purses and a closet filled with women's clothing. On a dresser in the bedroom lay half a dozen wrapped Christmas packages. None had been addressed.

The shooting brought hundreds of Rogers Park residents to the scene. Police immediately placed a guard around the apartment raided and refused admittance to all the curious. During this time it was confidently felt by the police that the dead men had been members of the Dillinger gang. While not committing himself on their identities, Capt. Stege said he was sure the men were Dillinger's companions.

When Deputy Blaul arrived he strongly supported this idea.

"This man's Dillinger," he said, gazing at the face of the dead gunman lying in the kitchenette. "The other two look like Jack Hamilton and Harry Pierpont."

It was about midnight, nearly three hours after the raid and slayings, that the dead men were identified as Katzewitz, Ginsburg, and Tattlebaum.

The disappointment at police headquarters was great. However, as one police official observed later, the raid was not without its useful purpose.

"John Dillinger and his gang can get an idea that we mean business from this," said Capt. Stege.

"We had information that this apartment in Farwell avenue was a hideout for a mob connected with the Dillinger gang. We raided it with that belief in mind. We did not shoot first. These men shot first at us. It was only by a miracle that Reynolds, Dawe, and several others, including myself, were not killed in the first gunfire."

Police records show that Katewitz and Tattlebaum were arrested with five other men, two of them Streator policemen, for the holdup of the Union National bank in Streator. The robbery was committed on May 16, 1932, by two gangs, united for the purpose. One was from Chicago and the other from Streator. The Chicago gang included Katewitz, Tattlebaum, Abe Rotskoff, and Jacob Pearson, according to the records.

The prisoners had been in custody for a month in the county jail at Ottawa, when on a visiting day five of their confederates appeared. One of the visitors handed a revolver through the bars to Katzewitz.

Katzewitz did the rest. He menaced the turnkey, George Mosley, forcing him to surrender the keys. Then he dashed upstairs and freed Tattlebaum and Pearson. He forgot Rotskoff. Pearson, Katzewitz, and Tattlebaum walked out of the jail hurriedly, then ran to a waiting automobile.

That was the last time two of them were seen—until last night.

Examining the men's records further, police found that Katzewitz, alias Katzwitz, Katzowitz, and Frank Lewis was sentenced to Pontiac reformatory in 1923 on a charge of larceny. He was released in December of the same year on a writ of habeas corpus. He was arrested a number of times after that for minor offenses and on suspicion, but encountered no serious difficulties until the Streator robbery.

MAYOR KELLY PRAISES POLICE FOR KILLING OF THREE CRIMINALS

Mayor Kelly hurried to the detective bureau last night after he heard of the north side gun battle in which three criminals were killed and congratulated the police on their work.

Calling Supervising Capt. John Stege at the scene of the shooting, the mayor first asked him if any of his men had been wounded. Informed that all were safe, the mayor said:

"I want to compliment you, captain, and all the policemen involved in the fight. This shows what the Chicago police can do."

Putting down the receiver, Mayor Kelly declared that Chicago had a wonderful force of policemen and that "if we just let them alone" they would make the city too hot for criminals of the type who were slain.

"But the thing that pleases me most," he added, "was that not one of the policemen suffered a wound. That showed real efficiency."

State's Attorney Courtney also congratulated Capt. Stege and his men for their work.

"In one swift move these brave policemen cleaned out an obviously criminal gang," said Mr. Courtney. "My elation is heightened by the fact that none of the policemen was hurt."

13 CONVICTS GET THEIR FREEDOM FOR CHRISTMAS

Gov. Horner gave thirteen convicts in the state prisons something to rejoice about yesterday. Each received a conditional pardon.

All the prisoners were convicted under the old law against robbery with a gun and were sentenced to ten years to life. In 1927 a new law was passed, fixing the punishment for this crime at one year to life. A situation then developed in which criminals sentenced under the new law often were paroled years before those convicted under the old one.

There are 540 of the old type prisoners. To make justice more exact the state board of pardons and paroles drafted new regulations. Yesterday's were the first pardons under this new rule.

Eight of those named are now at Joliet. They are John Murray, Philip Mansfield, William Jennings, Leon Conroyd, John Daly, and Paul H. Hendricks, all of Chicago; Harold Srapr, La Salle county, and Jim McGinnis, Rock Island county. Melvin Beck, Sangamon county, and Roy Bell, Cook county, are to be released from Pontiac, and Chuck Carneghi, Vermilion county, Charles Standridge, Sangamon county, and William B. Bolton, Washington county, from Chester.

240 Gallons of Liquor Stolen from Police Patrol

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 21.—(AP)—A Norfolk police patrol wagon bringing 240 gallons of bootleg liquor from the Ocean View precinct to headquarters was hijacked by liquor runners this afternoon. They escaped with the wagon and liquor.

THREE SLAYERS DIE IN CHAIR AT CHESTER PRISON

Two Are Executed for Torture Murder.

Chester, Ill., Dec. 22 [Friday].—(AP)—Harry Shelby, 45, and John Allen, 26, torture slayers of an aged Jasper county woman, and Martin Gray, 28, a Negro, confessed slayer of a Negro woman in Centralia, were executed in the electric chair of the southern Illinois penitentiary early today.

Shelby was the first of the trio to die, being pronounced dead at 12:32 a. m., seven minutes after he entered the chair.

Allen, Shelby's nephew, entered the chair at 12:44 and was pronounced dead at 12:47.

Pronounced Dead in 4 Minutes.

Gray was pronounced dead at 12:57, four minutes after he had entered the chair.

Shelby and Allen were convicted for the murder of Mrs. Mary Schrader, 82, who died from a beating and rape she suffered the night of Aug. 29 last when three men invaded her farm home near Newton.

Shelby and Allen were convicted principally on the testimony of Miss Anna Schrader, 46, daughter of the slain woman. She charged the two men raped her and her aged mother and then beat and otherwise mistreated them in an effort to force them to disclose the hiding place of their money.

The state charged rape by Shelby and Allen as the cause of the aged woman's death.

Gray, whose home was in Macomb, Miss., was executed for slaying Susie Gregory, Centralia Negress.

Confesses Four Other Murders.

When Gray arrived at the penitentiary he confessed to four other murders. He said he killed a Chicago Heights Negro in 1923, and two years later killed a woman in Quitman, Miss. Later he killed a Negro who had assisted him in a $20,000 Shreveport, La., bank robbery. Following the Louisiana slaying Gray said he killed a Mexican in Beaumont, Tex., during a robbery.

Shelby, asked if he had anything to say, started to sing. Finally authorities told him he would have to stop.

"Well, if I can't sing cut it loose," he shouted.

The current was thrown on.

Allen said only, "I am not guilty."

SELL IVAR KREUGER'S PROPERTY AT AUCTION TO SATISFY U. S. CLAIM

New York, Dec. 21.—[Special.]—A sale of the property of the late Ivar Kreuger from his penthouse brought about $8,000 today at public auction in Jersey City. The sale was to satisfy the federal government and other creditors of the Swedish "match king," who shot and killed himself in his Paris apartment on March 12, 1932. The internal revenue bureau claims from the estate $19,000 in unpaid income taxes.

Some of the bids were far below the ordinary retail value of the articles under the hammer. An oil painting on a wood panel 14 by 18 inches by Paul Peter Rubens entitled "Bacchanalian" which the administrator valued at $20,000 was withdrawn from the block when no more than $1,500 was bid. Two silver corkscrews were knocked down, however, for $15 each. A large silver-plated tray brought $9 before it was discovered the metal had been a fixture from a chandelier in Kreuger's apartment.

A portrait of an old man by Dietrich of the Flemish school was sold for $500, a portrait of a girl, signed by Zorn, for $425, and a painting of a musician, on copper, by Douven, for $80. A lace table cover brought $125 and another $80. A 40-volume set of Dickens, including an envelope hand-written by the author, brought $275.

MACHINE GUN BANDITS HOLD UP 15 WOMEN

Six masked robbers, one of whom carried a machine gun, invaded the offices of the Studebaker Sales Company of Chicago, 45 West 24th street, yesterday afternoon. After terrorizing fifteen women employés and three men, the gang fled with $500.

Acting according to a plan that apparently had been carefully thought out, the bandits divided as they went into the office. The machine gunner stationed himself at the door, two of the men covered the manager, David Stafford, and two others menaced fourteen girl employés.

The sixth robber then walked to the rear and thrust a shotgun into the face of Miss Ida Phillips, cashier, and compelled her to hand over the contents of the cash drawer. While the hand was in the office a small crowd of curious onlookers collected in front of the building, but dispersed when the sentinel at the door pointed the machine gun toward them. The bandits fled in an automobile with a seventh man at the wheel.

FALL IN HOME IS FATAL.

Kearn McNeal, 45 years old, 13925 South Michigan avenue, died in the county hospital last night of injuries suffered Sunday, when he fell at his home.

SHAFFER FINDS REAL RIVAL IN SPRINTING GAME

Hyman Shaffer, 30 years old, 3810 Fillmore street, was posted at North avenue and Mohawk street last night, peddling sheets containing the words of popular songs used in violation of the copyright laws, when he was approached by Policeman James Korzyk and John H. McFarlane, an agent of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

Shaffer took to his heels, and soon he was half a block away. A few moments later, however, he felt a prod in the back and turned to discover that it came from Policeman Korzyk's gun.

"Say," said Shaffer a few minutes later to the desk sergeant at the Hudson avenue station, "I thought I could run. Who is that guy that caught me?"

"He's the fellow who won the 50, 100 and 220 yard dashes in the last police field meet," he was told.

"O," said Shaffer.

INDICT NINE MORE FOR LOOP MAIL ROBBERY PLOT

Banker and Lawyer Are Seized in Texas.

The federal government's investigation of the $250,000 mail robbery which occurred at Clark and Adams streets one year ago this month moved nearer completion yesterday with the release of a new indictment naming nine defendants, among them the former president of a national bank in Texas.

It is expected that this and previous indictments will be superseded by a blanket indictment in the near future. Thirty men in all will probably be named in the final indictment. Among them, it is said, will be John J. [Boss] McLaughlin, Chicago gambler and politician, who is listed in an old indictment. This was the one that included Edgar Lebensberger, owner of the 225 club, who ended his life on Oct. 6, the same day the indictment was returned.

Arrest Banker and Lawyer.

Among those hit in yesterday's action were Z. D. Bonner, former president of the Commercial National bank of San Antonio, Tex., and John H. Cunningham, an attorney of the same city. Both were arrested in Texas yesterday. It was after their arrest that the new indictment was released.

The seven other men named were Harry N. Royster, stunt flyer and reputed air messenger for the gang which handled the loot of the loop mail holdup; Izzie Lazarus, James De Grasse and his brother, Joe De Grasse, minor Chicago hoodlums; John B. Morrow, Louis [Curly] Fishman and Sol Stern, alleged dealers in stolen bonds.

The technical charge against these seven is possession and conspiracy to sell $41,000 worth of Liberty bonds stolen in the Clark and Adams street robbery.

Hope for One Trial.

According to Assistant District Attorney Edward A. Fisher, the government is hoping to include its entire case against all the men involved in one general indictment charging conspiracy. The government is also considering the possibility of augmenting such a procedure with separate indictments in various parts of the country charging separate individuals or groups with possession. This latter procedure, however, would necessitate as many different trials. The one general indictment would mean one trial.

According to Mr. Fisher, all of the thirty men to be named in the one indictment have already been named in yesterday's action or in previous indictments, and all but four have been arrested and freed on bail. The missing quartet are Royster, Morrow, Lazarus and Joseph De Grasse.

Brains of Bond Gang.

"Boss" McLaughlin still looms as the brains of the bond disposing gang as the investigation is progressing, federal officials said yesterday. He is said to have sent James De Grasse to San Antonio to arrange for the sale of the bonds, which, it is charged, were delivered by Fishman and Stern. The bonds, it is declared, were sold for two-thirds of their face value.

Royster's alleged part in the plot, agents asserted, was to make air trips to meet prospective bond buyers.

The investigation, covering most of a year, is described as one of the most extensive ever attempted. It has covered a dozen central points, among them Chicago, San Antonio, St. Paul, New York, Detroit, Kansas City, Mo., and Springfield, Ill. Approximately $200,000 of the loot has been recovered, including $50,000 at San Antonio.

The indictment yesterday recalled the slaying of Gus Winkler, gang leader and dealer in stolen bonds, who was shot to death by a gang of killers in front of County Commissioner Charles H. Weber's beer warehouse at 1414 Roscoe street, a few days after Lebensberger's suicide. It was rumored that Winkler had been assisting the government agents in the mail robbery investigation.

Bonner on U. S. Jury.

San Antonio, Tex., Dec. 21.—[Special.]—Z. D. Bonner, former bank president, who with John H. Cunningham, attorney, was arrested today on a federal charge of conspiracy, was foreman of the federal grand jury here last August when he and Cunningham were arrested in another stolen bond case. Bonner was excused from further jury service.

Bonner resigned as president of the Commercial National bank during an investigation of the sale to the bank of $500,000 worth of bonds alleged to have been stolen from the Continental Bank and Trust company, New York. Later the Commercial bank was placed in hands of a federal conservator.

Cunningham is prominent in business and fraternal affairs. Bonds for the two in the Chicago case were signed today by L. J. Hart, wealthy realty operator, and Frank Cunningham, cousin of the accused lawyer.

COSTLY FURNISHINGS OF 225 CLUB BRING $2,210 AT AUCTION

The furnishings of the 225 club, owned by Edgar B. Lebensberger, who was found shot to death after he had been indicted by the government for disposing of bonds taken in a loop mail robbery, brought $2,210.95 in a public auction yesterday at the club quarters, 225 East Superior street. The club has been closed since Lebensberger's death. The goods sold had an estimated value of $45,000. Jack Rubens, chief investigator for the public administrator, conducted the sale.

More than 200 buyers appeared. They included mainly club and restaurant owners and furniture dealers. Several curiosity seekers vied with one another to possess place cards and letter heads of the club which lay scattered on the floor. The sale began in the basement, where commissary items such as sacks of flour and salt sold for a few cents each. It concluded in the luxurious gambling rooms on the third floor, where costly furnishings were auctioned.

The more expensive furnishings brought the lowest bids, while ash trays and small knicknacks sold for many times their value. A large grand piano went for $115 and a smaller gilded entertainers' piano for $80. The top prices paid were $298.45 for 127 gilded club chairs and $155 for the carpet in the former casino. The lowest sale price on the third floor was 25 cents for a table.

The proceeds of the sale will be applied against the debts of the club, which, according to Rubens, total $35,000. Rubens said there is also available to meet the debts $12,000 found in various bank accounts.

Coming to U. S.

MILAN, Dec. 21.—(AP)—Wanda Toscanini, 25, daughter of the famous director, Arturo Toscanini, was married to the pianist, Vladimir Horowitz, 27, today. The couple will embark for the United States aboard the S. S. Rex on Dec. 28, accompanied by Toscanini.

BARRED LAWYER IS SENTENCED TO 6 MONTHS IN JAIL

M. Edward Simmons, 45 years old, 1441 Morse avenue, a disbarred lawyer, was sentenced to six months in the Bridewell and fined $1 yesterday by Municipal Judge Alfred O. Erickson for practicing law without a license. Simmons served a 30 day sentence for a similar offense in 1930.

The complainant yesterday was Miss Mary Blotis, 21 years old, 2436 West 45th street. She testified that she had given Simmons $110 on Oct. 9 to foreclose a mortgage which she held, on his representation that he was an attorney, and that he had done nothing for her.

Simmons was disbarred in 1930 on charges of unethical practice. Attorney George L. Quilici, representing the Chicago Bar association, assisted in the prosecution yesterday.

$35,000 PLEDGED TO CHARITY FUND BY PACKING CO.

The Community fund of the Allied Chicago Charities announced yesterday that a pledge for $35,000 had been made by Swift & Co., bringing the grand total of the fund to $2,594,724. Other large pledges included $1,000 from the General Candy company, and $600 each from the Fred J. Ringley company and the employes of the James P. Marsh corporation.

Team captains in the trades and industries division expect to meet today at the Union League club for a final report on their activities before the Christmas holiday. They will resume work next Tuesday in an effort to close the campaign within the next two weeks.

U. S. ANTI-CRIME CAMPAIGN TOLD BY SEN. COPELAND

Details the Fight Planned Against Outlaws.

New York, Dec. 21.—(AP)—Senator Royal S. Copeland [Dem., N. Y.] made public tonight his program giving the federal government the power to extend its police units to fight crime now outside its jurisdiction. The senator is chairman of the senate committee investigating racketeering. The plan includes provisions empowering the federal government to:

Extend its authority to cover all kidnap cases.

End the requirement for a unanimous jury verdict in federal courts.

Supervise the extradition of witnesses from one state to another.

Power to Intervene.

To intervene in any state or community where the attorney general determines that local government has failed to function.

The last named power, according to Copeland's plan, would be conferred in a bill placing on the federal government the duty of protecting "states and all persons therein in the employment of a republican form of government as guaranteed in the constitution of the United States."

The power to intervene in kidnaping cases, Copeland said, would be included in a bill providing that, in the event of the disappearance of an individual, the presumption would exist after three days' absence that the person had been kidnaped and a state line had been crossed. The federal government could then use all its police power to trace the missing and presumably kidnaped individual.

Investigate "Kick Back" Racket.

Copeland announced his plan after a hearing of the committee at which members were told that the "kick back" racket, under which workers are required to return part of their wages, is virtually universal on construction jobs throughout the country.

He professed amazement at the testimony of George J. Atwell, president of the Atwell Foundation corporation, that 25 per cent of all wages paid under prevailing rate of wage agreements was returned by the workers.

Adolph Dzik, attorney for the racketeering committee of the American Federation of Labor building trades unions in New York, told the committee his life had been threatened because of his investigation of the matter. He said the "kick back" racket is usually the result of connivance between contractors and union leaders.

Senator Copeland said he would urge an immediate investigation by the United States attorney general and would press for remedial legislation if necessary.

Atwell declared that unless the situation was corrected, millions of dollars to be spent on the federal public works program and intended for labor would find its way into the hands of racketeers and unfair contractors.

N. U. PRESIDENT ASSESSED $2,500 IN AUTO CRASH

Damages of $2,500 were assessed against President Walter Dill Scott of Northwestern university for an automobile accident on July 24, 1932, in a verdict of a jury opened yesterday before Judge Paul McWilliams in the Superior court.

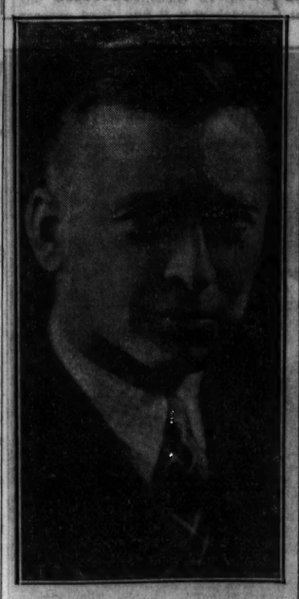
The plaintiff was Mrs. Marie Schuller, 910 Lawrence avenue. She charged that while driving between Barrington and Fox River Grove President Scott's automobile struck another car and forced it into the path of the car in which she and her husband were riding.

Mrs. Schuller was injured internally, she charged. A motion for new trial was set for Jan. 5.

ILL HEALTH CAUSES SUICIDE.

Joseph Skachs, 57 years old, hanged himself last night in the basement of his home at 2559 South Avers avenue, supposedly while despondent over ill health.

Guarded in Hospital



PROF. GARRETT H. LEVERTON

POLICE GUARDING N. U. PROFESSOR AFTER CAR CRASH

Prof. Garrett H. Leverton of the Northwestern university school of speech, who is under treatment at the Edgewater hospital for injuries suffered Sunday in an automobile collision, was given a police guard yesterday after his relatives reported that threats had been made against his life.

These threats, it was said, were sent over the telephone to Prof. Leverton's home at 1915 Sherman avenue, Evanston. At the residence last night no additional information was vouchsafed, members of the household saying they were anxious to avoid publicity. It is understood, however, that the threats grew out of the automobile accident.

Prof. Leverton was a passenger in a car driven by John Baird, an instructor in dramatics at Northwestern. They collided with a car driven by Mrs. Blossom Howard, 29 years old, 2000 Lincoln Park west, wife of Jack Howard, a tavern owner. Mrs. Howard was charged with reckless driving and driving while intoxicated. Yesterday she failed to appear in the Traffic court and her bonds of $100 were forfeited.

Baird is director of the Northwestern university theater and Prof. Leverton assistant director.

WINTER BEGINS TODAY; WEATHER DUE TO BE MILD

Comparatively mild temperatures, with a low mark of 32 degrees, will prevail today, the first day of winter, according to last night's forecast by C. A. Donnel, government meteorologist. Winter officially arrived in Chicago at 12:58 this morning, the time at which the sun reaches its lowest point in the south.

Forecaster Donnel yesterday refused to comment on the possibility of a white Christmas. He predicted fair and mild weather for tomorrow.

WOMAN DIES AFTER FALL.

A coroner's jury yesterday returned a verdict stating that Mrs. Josephine Tucholski, 60 years old, 4016 North Springfield avenue, died of injuries suffered last Friday in a fall at her home.

ALL U. S. SLEUTHS MAY BE MERGED INTO ONE FORCE

Cummings Studies Plan at Washington.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 21.—Special.]—A new move for a single federal investigating force is being considered by Attorney General Homer S. Cummings.

The attorney general has laid aside the question of pushing pending prohibition prosecutions until the Supreme court, after a hearing set for Jan. 18, decides whether liquor cases have been automatically quashed by repeal.

For Concerted Effort.

To coördinate federal investigations, the attorney general explained, each federal department may be asked to deputize its agents, who now work under only the laws affecting that department, as the agents of all other departments.

First trial of this plan is now under way between the treasury and justice departments, he said. All agents of the department of justice's alcoholic beverage section, formerly the prohibition bureau, have been deputized as revenue agents in the treasury's bureau of internal revenue.

Dry agents, now engaged primarily in protecting dry states against liquor shipments, will be fully equipped, since they have been sworn in as revenue agents also, to proceed against makers of moonshine, tax free liquor whenever they run across them. Previously moonshine clews uncovered by the department of justice would have to be reported to the treasury, causing delay.

If the new experiment works out well, the plan may be spread to all investigating forces of the government.

All Have Investigators.

In addition to its revenue staff the treasury has customs investigators and the secret service, the department of labor has immigration investigators, the interior departments has a staff of inspectors, and the department of justice has the bureau of investigation.

Consolidation of all these units under one head was not acceptable to those officials involved, the attorney general explained.

Pointing out that four court decisions have held that repeal automatically barred all further prohibition prosecutions, even though they were pending, whereas two other decisions have held that prosecutions which have started may continue, Attorney General Cummings said he would await a decision by the Supreme court.

Ouija Board Told Her to Shoot Father, Girl Says

St. Johns, Ariz., Dec. 21.—(AP)—Mattie Turley, 16, testified in juvenile court today a ouija board commanded her to shoot her father, so her mother, Dorothia Irene Turley, could "marry a young cowboy."

She pleaded guilty to a charge of attempted murder for the wounding of her father, E. J. Turley, chief gunner's mate of the naval reserve, and will be sentenced to the School for Girls at Randolph. The girl said that the ouija board order was given at a seance with her mother.

PARIS SUSPECTS SPY TRAIL LEADS INTO GERMANY

Yankees Protest Against Arrest in Paris.

PARIS, Dec. 21.—(AP)—A spy trail that police suspected would lead directly to "Germany's master organization" was sharply followed by authorities today in their investigations of a band in which they allege two Americans were the "liaison" agents.

Robert Gordon Switz, 29 year old native of East Orange, N. J., vehemently protested against his arrest on an espionage charge and also that of his wife, the former Marjorie Tilley, 22, of New York, it was reliably learned, when their attorney, Charles Moyse, visited him in Sante prison tonight.

They had been held incommunicado in separate penitentiaries pending an interview with the attorney. An examination of the Americans by an investigating magistrate, who will decide if they are to be held for trial, was scheduled for the next day or two.

Fear Leaders Have Escaped.

Meanwhile, a fear that the leaders of the suspected syndicate may have slipped through a widespread net inspired police to fresh activity in an effort to run down 40 members of what was described as the French section of an international spy ring.

Robert D. Murphy, the United States consul, was assigned the task of investigating the detention of the Switzs for the United States government.

Activities of the band were clouded in a haze of mystery, as there remained to be sifted a vast quantity of documents which were seized along with clandestine wireless sets, books, large sums of money, and photographic sets from the ten persons taken into custody.

Struggle to Unravel Mystery.

Police were groping to find a thread that they hoped would lead to the unraveling of a tangle of intrigue.

It was declared that until a complete study of the evidence is made officials would be unable to say definitely by whom the reputed syndicate was directed, but already there were indications that part of its activities centered on the eastern frontier, where France's new "iron ring" of fortifications against Germany have just been completed.

Other trails, equally mysterious, were said by authorities to lead to Finland, where more than a month ago 33 persons, including Arvid Jackson and his wife, former Michigan school teachers, were arrested and accused of espionage activities.

The vast scope of the police probe was shown in the issuing of about a thousand demands for information from banks, tourist agencies, and hotels in an effort to trace the movements of the band.

Authorities expressed the fear that highly valuable documents containing closely guarded French military secrets and sketches of the line of trenches along the frontier had already been spirited out of the country.

May Deport Prisoners.

In the mass of confiscated papers police professed to have found threads of evidence leading to Berlin. Communist documents taken from the baggage of the ten persons led to the belief at first that soviet espionage was involved, but the theory was later advanced that these papers may have been designed to becloud the trails.

Officials said the Switzs and the other foreigners might be deported unless dangerous evidence were uncovered against them.

The names of others held were given as Mme. Lidia Tchekaloff Stahl, 48, a Russian; Louis Martin, 43, a translator in the French ministry of marine; Mlle. Madeleine Mermt, 23, a French teacher; Benjamin Bercowitz and his wife, Clara, natives of Rumania; Moise Salmon, 26, and his wife, Chana, 27, Polish medical students, and Doucham Narandison, 42, a Serbian journalist.

Since the French counter-espionage service was said by Police Commissioner Mondanelle to have uncovered two cases of spying pointing toward Russia, the soviet angles were not dropped.

Watched Eastern Border, French Say.

Mondanelle said Mme. Stahl and Martin were employed by a "foreign power" to reorganize its espionage service in Finland, while "the others now in prison all were commissioned to watch over the military organization in eastern and southeastern France."

"The French investigators," he added, "are seeking to establish the responsibilities of persons who were in relations with two notorious women spies, Marie Schul, a Latvian, and Mlle. Varanbon, a self-styled drawing teacher."

Mme. Stahl, whose real name the commissioner said may be Marie Louise Martin, had been trailed to Finland by the French intelligence service, according to Mondanelle.

Documents allegedly obtained from spies were photographed, for easy hiding, on a minute scale in the darkroom of Mlle. Hermet, said police.

Bercowitz was described as the payoff man of the ring. Martin, who authorities said knows 68 languages, was employed in the secret code room of the navy department. Officials said he was "dominated" by Mme. Stahl, and that he once occupied her apartment while she was on a visit to the United States.

Americans Win Early Hearing.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 21.—(AP)—Representatives of the American embassy in Paris will "observe" the proceedings when Mr. and Mrs. Robert Switz, American citizens, are given a preliminary hearing Saturday on charges of espionage.

In answer to a request from the state department, Theodore Marriner, American chargé d'affaires in Paris, today notified the department that he had made an investigation of the case and the status of the American couple. The French secret police, he reported, were convinced they had evidence of a vast international spy ring in which Mr. and Mrs. Switz were implicated.

As a special concession, Marriner said, the examining magistrate had promised him that the Americans would be given an immediate preliminary hearing on Saturday in advance of the examination of other prisoners arrested in the roundup. Mr. and Mrs. Switz have retained a French attorney to represent them.

GREECE SERVES NOTICE ON INSULL TO LEAVE JAN. 31

Refuses to Give Him an Extension.

ATHENS, Dec. 21.—(AP)—The Greek government today served a written notice on Samuel Insull, fugitive Chicago utilities operator, that he must leave Greece by Jan. 31.

The alien department notified Insull that the government will make no further extension of his permit to remain in this country from which the United States seeks to extradite him to stand trial on charges of fraudulent bankruptcy in connection with the collapse of the Insull utilities empire, with a loss of millions of dollars to small stockholders.

Greek courts twice have refused the American request for the 74 year old fugitive, but the present decision has no relation to the Greek courts.

INSULL SHOWS STRAIN

BY EUGENE SPECK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ATHENS, Greece, Dec. 21.—Samuel Insull presents the appearance today of a very old man complaining of his health, yet cultivating an interest in what the world is doing which seems to temper the pessimism sometimes felt in disillusioned old age.

He will not talk about his own plans, but is eager to discuss any other topic. Whether it is about Anglo-Irish relations, the present status of which he deplores, or the industrial development of Greece, about which he is enthusiastic, Insull is alive and well informed.

He acknowledges that his French is not so good and that his Greek is worse, but he is used to getting the news four days late through London newspapers and does not mind any more.

Silent on Future.

But he absolutely refuses to mention his future or discuss what he will do or where he will go now that he must seek refuge from American justice elsewhere.

"How long are you going to be in Athens?" Insull asked me at the beginning of our interview.

"Perhaps you can say," I replied.

"I never speak for publication," he answered shortly. "All so called interviews with me which have appeared have been fakes. I have nothing to say."

During our talk Insull twice referred to "my arrest."

Insull was seated in a deep armchair in a sumptuous apartment on the Boulevard St. Sophia. The flat has a row of windows with a long iron grille running along the front of the building. The view embraces the American consulate general a half block down the street, where his American passport is still unrecognized.

Instructions have been received by the American minister to renew the passport whenever it is required to facilitate his flight to a country from which he might be extradited.

YOUNG INSULL SURRENDERS ON FRAUD CHARGES

Two Associates Also Give Bail in Indiana.

Samuel Insull Jr., who until the collapse of his father's utility empire was vice chairman of the board of the Northern Indiana Public Service company, and two other former directors of the concern surrendered at Crown Point yesterday on indictments voted on Tuesday by the grand jury of Lake county, Indiana. All three men were released immediately after they posted $10,000 bonds.

The others who surrendered yesterday were Charles W. Chase, who now is general manager of the Indianapolis Railways company, and Edward W. Lloyd, vice president of the Commonwealth Edison company of Chicago. With their surrender six of the seven former directors of the utility concern now under indictment have voluntarily submitted themselves to the custody of Mrs. Lillian Holley, sheriff of Lake county.

Reveal Counts in Indictment.

One other development of yesterday was the disclosure of the four counts contained in the blanket indictment returned against the seven officials. Each man is charged with embezzlement, grand larceny and conspiracy to commit both those acts. In Indiana such indictments are kept secret until the defendants have been arrested and it was not until late yesterday afternoon that Prosecutor Robert Estill revealed the nature of the counts.

The first count in the indictment charged that the seven directors in May, 1932, converted $217,000 to the use of the Midland Utilities company—another Insull concern which was the holding company controlling the stock of the Northern Indiana Public Service company, an operating concern.

The indictment charges that the conversion of funds was accomplished by the juggling of a note for $2,533,375, bearing 6 per cent interest, which was given to the Northern Indiana company by the Midland Utilities company on Dec. 31, 1931.

The second count charges conspiracy to commit embezzlement of the $217,000, the third charges grand larceny of the whole note, and the last count charges conspiracy to commit grand larceny.

Explanation by Prosecutor.

Prosecutor Estill said the grand jury had taken the position that this transaction was one among a number upon which indictments could have been voted. He stated that conviction on any one of the counts would entail a punishment for the directors of two to 14 years in the penitentiary. He asserted that the grand jurors in their report to the judge which accompanied the indictment pointed out that they had felt that the gross mismanagement of the company's affairs and the milking of assets for holding companies and the concealment of surpluses in order to justify high rates had warranted other indictments.

"The jury felt, however," said Prosecutor Estill, "that the one indictment would accomplish its purpose. It will remain the right of the state to file additional charges against these defendants at any time it is deemed necessary."

Morse Dell Plain, president of the Northern Indiana Public Service company who held the same post during the period of the alleged frauds; Bernard P. Shearon, secretary treasurer of the company, and Thomas G. Hamilton, a former director, surrendered to the Lake county sheriff on Wednesday afternoon.

Defendant Reported Ill.

The only defendant who has not yet posted bond is John H. Gulick, former director of the Northern Indiana company and now a vice president of the Commonwealth Edison Company of Chicago. Attorneys representing Mr. Gulick yesterday informed Prosecutor Estill that he is ill at his home, 219 Lake Shore drive. They added that Mr. Gulick's personal counsel, James G. Condon, was not in Chicago, but was expected to return today and make arrangements for his client's bail.

ICKES WILL LEAVE HOSPITAL IN TIME FOR CHRISTMAS AT HOME

Washington, D. C., Dec. 21.—(AP)—Physicians at the naval hospital today gave Secretary Ickes the Christmas present he wanted most—permission to leave the hospital in time to spend the holiday at home.

So improved was the secretary from injuries he suffered in a recent fall on the ice that he was able to attend the President's cabinet meeting today at the White House, but he returned immediately afterward to the hospital.

Aside from stiffness resulting from a fractured rib and deranged muscles caused by the fall, the secretary said he "felt fine." He expects to be back at his desk in the interior department Tuesday.

CHRISTMAS PAY CHECKS MAILED TO TEACHERS

Board Gets Cash from Warrant Sale.

While 18,000 checks for a total of $2,000,000 were being mailed last night to the Chicago teachers and other school employes, public officials were seeking some way to meet the additional pay roll obligations of $22,000,000 covering unpaid teachers' salaries for the last six months of school work. The current pay day is for the first half of April of this year.

A proposal to apportion both state and city liquor taxes for payment of teachers' salaries was pushed in several quarters. School officials pointed out, however, that this revenue would finance the Chicago public school pay roll for only one month or possibly two months of the year and would afford no immediate relief.

Horner Eager to Help.

In Springfield Gov. Horner said that he was eager to aid the Chicago schools in the emergency. He said he would be willing to call a special session of the assembly to consider legislation providing for the use of the city liquor taxes for the schools.

"I favor using state liquor revenues for the schools," said Gov. Horner, "so long as this does not increase the tax burden on owners of property nor deny them the relief to which they are entitled.

The present law provides that liquor revenue can not be diverted from the city corporate fund. At a council meeting Wednesday Ald. John S. Clark [30th], chairman of the finance committee, pointed out that if the liquor revenues were diverted it would mean a further retrenchment in the city's 1934 budget. It was shown that city employés are two and a half months in arrears in their salaries.

Bankes Buy Warrants.

The two weeks' Christmas pay for the teachers was obtained through the sale of school tax warrants to five loop banks. The checks from the banks reached City Treasurer James A. Kearns, ex-officio treasurer of the school board, at 4:30 o'clock. Mr. Kearns notified James B. McCahey, president of the board, who released the pay roll.

Charles Gilbert, secretary of the board, had the employés' checks in envelopes and when the final word was received they were dispatched to the postoffice. Teachers' checks were sent to principals for distribution, while the checks for janitors, firemen, and passed a resolution to break up the engineer-custodians.

The pay day resulted from a series of conferences arranged by Mayor Kelly and attended by McCahey, Kearns, City Controller Upham, and banking representatives.

Many of the teachers were not cheered up by the prospects of the two weeks' pay. Miss Mary J. Herrick, president of the Federation of Women High School Teachers, declared that half the teachers already had assigned their pay to stores and other creditors.

Little Pay in Cash.

For their services in 1933 the teachers, after the current pay day, will have received one and a half months' pay in cash and two months in 1933 educational fund tax anticipation warrants. Many of the teachers have had to part with these warrants at a ten per cent discount.

In its struggle to pay the back salaries the present board of education has been confronted with outstanding tax warrants and interest totaling $85,000,000. This obligation has prevented further sales of school securities.

The school board met yesterday and passed a resolution to brek up the warrants in small denominations for the banks. Then the trustees went to the city hall for a conference with the aldermen concerning the issuance of refunding bonds to redeem 1928 and 1929 warrants and interest.

By a resolution adopted a week ago the school board had provided for the issuance of 6 per cent bonds, maturing from 3 to 20 years. The Chicago recovery administration, headed by Newton C. Farr, opposed this interest rate and announced it would not approve a higher rate than 4 per cent.

Chicago's half million school children will leave their classrooms this afternoon for their Christmas vacation. The schools will reopen on Monday, Jan. 8.

CONTRACT FOR 1ST OF SANITARY WORKS IS LET

$42,000,000 Porgram to Start Tuesday.

Having received their grant of $42,169,315 from the government Wednesday, the trustees of the sanitary district yesterday let the first contract for the two year program of sewage treatment works, which, once well under way, will give employment to more than 13,000 men.

All speed possible was the watchword at the meeting yesterday and several hundred men will start work Tuesday as the result of the action. The Hurlihy Mid-Continent company signed the first contract, agreeing to resume work immediately on the Calumet works at 125th street, east of Cottage Grove avenue. The contract is for $2,075,000 and is for one of the five projects suspended eighteen months ago for lack of cash.

Start Four in Three Weeks.

Ross A. Woodhull, chairman of the district's finance committee, said that within two or three weeks the other four suspended projects will be resumed. They will aggregate an expenditure of $8,000,000 and will employ 4,500 men.

It will be a few days later when the bulk of the program is started. Thomas J. Bowler, president of the district board, said that a survey of the work to be done will first be made, then contracts let. He estimated that within a month or five weeks the work will be well started.

The $42,000,000 grant was the largest outlay made by the public works administration. Mr. Woodhull received the money Wednesday at the federal reserve bank and it was deposited in five loop banks.

Okay $39,000,000 Budget.

Before they adjourned their last meeting before Christmas the trustees also recommended passage of the 1934 budget of $39,301,606.39, of which the $42,000,000 expenditures is a part. As recommended by the finance committee the budget is lower by $302,421 than the first estimate made public Tuesday. This represented a cut of $454,055 from the item of bonds and interest and the addition of $150,633 to the appropriation for the engineering division.

There was no debate when Chairman Woodhull introduced the budget and it was put over for probable passage Jan. 2.

In letting the first contract for renewal of work the trustees made plain that they will not be passing out the jobs. The contractors, they said, will have entire charge of this phase.

SUICIDE VERDICT RETURNED.

A verdict of suicide while temporarily insane was returned yesterday by a coroner's jury following investigation of the death of Robert Diver, 17 years old, who hanged himself Wednesday in his home at 303 South 5th avenue, La Grange.

LATEST PLANE OF LINDBERGHS GOES TO MUSEUM

New York, Dec. 21.—[Special.]—The American Museum of Natural History announced today that Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh had presented to the museum the monoplane in which on Tuesday they completed a 29,000 mile aerial survey.

The announcement was made after a conference at the museum attended by Col. Lindbergh and Mrs. Lindbergh, F. Trubee Davison, president of the museum, and other officials.

The plane, a Lockheed-Sirius monoplane powered by a Wright whirlwind motor and equipped with pontoons, will be placed on exhibition in the new Hall of Ocean Life.

It is expected that the ship, now being cleaned up after its long trip, will be placed in the museum by Jan. 1.

TEACHERS IN N. Y. BUY $4,950,000 WORTH OF CITY'S SECURITIES

New York, Dec. 21.—[Special.]—School teachers of the city today rescued New York from its year-end financial difficulties by buying $4,950,000 of its securities, which bankers had refused to buy, with their pension reserves, thus supplying the funds needed to cover deficits in the 1933 budget and to meet this month's pay rolls.

The purchase takes care of the deficits, with something to spare. It had been estimated the city needed $2,305,000, of which $450,000 was required for teachers' salaries as a result of the shortage in state aid, more than $1,000,000 for hospitals and more than $500,000 for the police force.

Failure of the city to obtain these funds would have tied up the salaries of teachers, firemen, policemen and the rest of the city employés. Under the city's agreement with the bankers it cannot sell them special revenue bonds or corporate stock.

RICH CONTRACTOR'S SON WORKS FOR CWA, LIVES IN A MANSION

Cleveland, O., Dec. 21.—[Special.]—For six hours each day Bascom Little Jr., son of a wealthy building contractor, works for CWA as an estimator. He receives $1.20 an hour.

At night, the day's work done, he goes to the Little mansion, atop Cedar hill. If he is too tired from the day's labors to climb the magnificent staircase to any one of the four floors he may press a button and ride up in an elevator.

Little Jr., who is 22, is one of the 39,000 Clevelanders put to work by President Roosevelt's emergency civil works project.

He registered for a job Dec. 4, stating that he had high school education and one and one-half years of architecture. On Dec. 11 he was put to work. His rate is $7.20 a day or $36 a week.

B. C. Seiple, in charge of CWA registration, had this to say about Little's employment:

"We do not investigate the applicants because we assume any one who applies is in need of a job. He is a single man and would not have been hired save for the fact that during the first week there were not enough applicants to fill our quota for architects. We were under instructions to put as many as possible to work as soon as possible."

GRAND JURORS TO QUIZ VICTIM OF BAULER'S GUN

Indictment Expected to Follow.

The Cook county grand jury today will visit the Alexian Brothers hospital, where Policeman John J. Ahearn, who was shot by Ald. Mathias [Paddy] Bauler outside of Bauler's saloon at 343 West North avenue on Tuesday morning, will be questioned under oath as to his version of the shooting.

One or more indictments are expected to be returned by the jurors after they interview Ahearn. Thirteen witnesses to the shooting were questioned yesterday as the result of an order by State's Attorney Courtney in which he declared that a thorough investigation of the shooting would be conducted without regard to any possible political influence which might be exerted by Ald. Bauler, who is regarded as a minor Democratic leader.

Reported Owner of Saloon.

Ahearn was reported yesterday to be a partner in a saloon at 4437 North Western avenue. The bartender in the place, when questioned by a reporter, declared that the tavern was "John Ahearn's place" and identified the owner as the wounded policeman. Assistant State's Attorney Emmett Moynihan said that this report would be investigated and that Ahearn would be questioned by the grand jurors concerning his reported saloon-keeping activities.

The witnesses who testified yesterday included Peter Bauler, brother of the alderman, who was bartender in the Bauler tavern at the time of the shooting; Mathias Wagner, street superintendent of the 43d ward; William Eick, a deputy sheriff; William Duplessis, an electrician employed by the Lincoln park board; Sheriff William D. Meyering, Policeman Edward Hayes, Miss Mary V. Tyler, Deputy Sheriff Joseph Merrion, and Frank L. Farragoi, Sheriff Meyering's chauffeur. All were present when the shooting occurred.

Four other witnesses were Lieut. Thomas Rowan and Patrolmen James Mikes, John Currin, and Frank Raia, who coöperated in the investigation of the shooting.

Witnesses' Stories Differ.

The grand jurors instructed the witnesses not to discuss their testimony. It was learned that most of them gave the statements which they had previously given publicly, and the jury, as a result, heard conflicting testimony as to what had actually occurred. The jurors then expressed a desire to question Ahearn, and Prosecutor Moynihan made arrangements for them to visit the hospital at noon today.

Farragoi, the chauffeur for Sheriff Meyering, said outside the jury room that he had saved the sheriff from being wounded when Ald. Bauler and Policeman Ahearn exchanged shots.

"We were leaving the place and walking toward the curb when the shooting began," he said. "We were in the line of fire and the first thing I did was to push the sheriff to one side."

Policeman Hayes and Miss Tyler are reported to have told the grand jury that Ald. Bauler shot first at Ahearn and that the alderman appeared to be intoxicated. Peter Bauler and friends of the alderman said that the policeman knocked Ald. Bauler down, thus helping to support Bauler's self-defense story.

Sheriff Gives Testimony.

Sheriff Meyering was reported to have testified that he had tried to pacify Ahearn just before the shooting, but that his back was turned when the first shots were fired. Each of the principals in the duel exchanged two shots. Assistant Sheriff Frank Wright was wounded in the cross-fire.

At St. Joseph's hospital yesterday Wright was reported to be "completely out of danger unless some unforeseen complication sets in." The condition of Policeman Ahearn in the Alexian Brothers hospital also was reported improved.

"We are going to get to the bottom of this affair and place the blame where it belongs," said State's Attorney Courtney. "All these witnesses were rushed before the grand jury so that their testimony under oath may be put on record and we will not be confronted with a change of stories at a future date when the case comes to trial."

TAVERN FINDS LAST 100 YEARS HARDEST; RETURNS TO ITS OWN

Etymologists yesterday expressed some bewilderment over the battle now raging in Chicago in which the forces of law and order have determined to replace the old time saloon with the tavern of repeal.

It was pointed out that the tavern has turned the tables on the saloon after more than a century. One hundred years ago the tavern, a place where food, liquor, and lodgings were furnished the customer, was in high disfavor with the reform forces.

Liquor dealers then hit upon the idea of giving their place of business a certain elegance by painting the name "saloon" on their signs. At that time, according to dictionaries the saloon was a "spacious and elegant apartment for reception of company or for works of art; a large room or parlor."

The term saloon gradually was dragged down to the point where the dictionaries had to recognize it as a place where "intoxicating liquors are sold and drunk; a grogshop." The saloon, though thus badly reduced in caste, managed to survive the abuses of prohibition. With the return of legal liquor, however, it seems doomed to bow to its old enemy the tavern.

QUEBEC LIQUOR PLAN IS FAVORED FOR WISCONSIN

Madison, Wis., Dec. 21.—[Special.]—The Wisconsin assembly, which in previous ballots indicated a preference for return of state liquor laws that existed prior to prohibition, late today advanced through engrossment one of its strictest hard liquor regulatory measures.

By a 53 to 42 vote the assembly advanced to third reading a bill introduced by two Democratic assemblymen which would create a liquor distribution system in Wisconsin similar to that functioning in Quebec. It was introduced by Assemblymen Warren D. Leary, Rice Lake, and F. E. Bachhuber, Wausau.

The principal feature of the bill is that the liquor authority would have the exclusive right to purchase and sell intoxicating liquors except where local referenda decide to permit tavern sales in addition. Even then tavern-keepers would buy liquor from the state authority at prices fixed by the authority.

Profits from liquor sales would go 75 per cent to local governments on per capita basis of school pupils and 25 per cent to the state treasury.

Ohio Senate Votes State Monopoly.

Columbus, O., Dec. 22 (Friday).—(AP)—The senate early today adopted by a vote of 23 to 5 a liquor control bill providing for a state monopoly and sales of spirits by the glass in hotels, clubs, restaurants, and on watercraft. The house will meet at 10 a. m. today to pass upon the revised measure.

Pennsylvania 19th State to Ratify Child Amendment

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 21.—(AP)—Pennsylvania today ratified the child labor amendment to the federal constitution.

The house approved the senate resolution for ratification, and an hour later the senate approved the house ratifier. It was the 19th state to ratify. Thirty-six are necessary.

NO NEW LIQUOR LAW IN ILLINOIS BEFORE JAN. 3

Special Session Recesses and Goes Home.

BY PARKE BROWN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 21.—[Special.]—All efforts to pass an Illinois liquor control law before the holidays were abandoned today. The state senate, which has been adding one patch after another to the measure as it was presented under the auspices of the administration, recessed late this afternoon until Jan. 3.

There was not even an effort to advance the bill from second to third or final reading. Consideration of 162 amendments was completed on second reading, leaving the bill in such shape that even those somewhat intimate with its construction were unable to say exactly what it would look like in print, and then the twelve day recess was taken by general agreement. The house, which has had a skeleton organization waiting for senate action, adopted the same resolution.

Horner Shocked, but Smiling.

The lay off was something of a shock to Gov. Horner, who had hoped that the senate would "finish its job" this week so that the house could put the bill up to final action in the house during holiday week. But he took the setback smilingly.

"I am sometimes disappointed, but never discouraged," he said when he heard the news. As a matter of fact there was nothing for the senate to do but to take time out. The attendance had dwindled to less than the 34 required for emergency enactment, and the indications were that not a majority even of the thirty or so present would vote for advancement to third reading. The long series of amendments had estranged so many former supporters here and there that only a most careful process of interviewing and buttonholing would have disclosed just what chances—if any—there were for the bill.

No Effort for Last Stand.

During this windup day for 1933 there was no attempt to reconcile the differences between Gov. Horner and Mayor Kelly of Chicago in connection with their latest agreement to disagree. A. J. Horan, a lieutenant of National Committeeman P. A. Nash and a member of the Kelly inner councils, was here long enough to start rumors that a new compromise effort was under way. But it was established that Horan's mission here was on private business and that he brought no message from Chicago.

Gov. Horner said he had not heard from Mayor Kelly. He seemingly takes the position that the long list of amendments he fathered covered all the points in the so-called agreement of last Sunday and that any movement toward revision must emanate from Chicago. He indicated he would not make the first peace move.

Horner Denies "Confusion."

"There was no mistake on my part as to what the understanding was," he said when told of Mayor Kelly's claim that some confusion must have arisen concerning the agreement. "The understanding included the amendment in reference of license appeals to the state commission. In saying this I do not question Mayor Kelly's good faith or that he relies on his memory as to the details of the understanding."

His next statement included something of a shock to his hearers, as it was tantamount to saying that the Chicago liquor ordinance is not worth the paper upon which it was written.

"I am for home rule for municipalities," he said, "just as I always have been. The purpose of this bill was to enable the cities to pass their own legislation for effective control of intoxicants. There have been some efforts in that direction, notably in Chicago, but under the present statutory conditions there can be no satisfactory regulation by cities.

"Chicago Ordinance Not Valid."

"In my opinion the Chicago ordinance is not valid. There is no legally sound regulation in Chicago."

Once he showed slight irritation over the situation.

"Since the start of the session," he said, "there has been one monkey wrench after another thrown into the machinery."

At about this time two senators called to say farewell and extend their holiday greetings. "But why," he asked, "didn't you continue work for the four days remaining before Christmas?"

Today's final grist of amendments in the senate did not include any points in dispute between Gov. Horner and Mayor Kelly. Several proposals were acted upon, but most of them were relatively minor. There was a late flurry over approval of an amendment by Edward P. O'Grady [Dem., Chicago], which was supposed to guarantee nickel beer. Lieut. Gov. Donovan, however, pointed out that the amendment simply prohibited retailers from charging more than five cents for eight ounces "or less" of the foamy liquid, which would permit a retailer to charge a nickel for "a thimbleful" of beer.

Woods' Proposal Buried.

An amendment by Roy C. Woods [Rep., Chicago], which was admittedly of Chicago newspaper origin, aimed to banish "the old time saloon," mustered only a handful of votes, being beaten, 10 to 22.

Another amendment by Earl B. Searcy [Rep., Springfield] was adopted. It would bar mayors, aldermen, village presidents and trustees from being interested financially in selling alcoholic liquor at retail.

Other amendments approved included the following:

No intoxicants except beer may be sold by the drink within 1,500 feet of the main campus of the University of Illinois.

Hotels may serve liquor in rooms not within clear view of the street.

Violators of the 18th amendment shall not be barred from receiving licenses under the new law.

Railroads may serve strong drink only in bottles containing approximately 2 ounces of liquor.

As matters stand now the much amended bill will go to the printers so that it will be in shape for advancement to third reading on Jan. 3. That step will require the supporting vote of only a majority of 26. But passage for immediate effectiveness will require 34 votes. If that total should be reached the measure would still have to go back to the house for concurrence in the many senate amendments, requiring 102 votes.

BOTTLING COMPANY OFFICIAL ENDS LIFE BY INHALING AUTO FUMES

New York, Dec. 21.—[Special.]—Frederick M. Campbell, 33, an executive of the Coca Cola Bottling company of New York, Inc., committed suicide today by inhaling carbon monoxide fumes from the exhaust of his automobile in the garage of his home, in the fashionable Woodacres section of New Rochelle.

Mr. Campbell's wife said they had a quarrel before she retired at 1:30 a. m.

The Campbell children, Patsy, 5, and John, 4, narrowly escaped asphyxiation. They were asleep in their bedroom two stories above the garage.

MAYOR DEFENDS CHICAGO'S STAND FOR HOME RULE

Discusses Gov. Horner's Opposing Views.

Mayor Kelly said yesterday that Gov. Horner "has evidently changed his mind, misunderstood our agreement, or is mistaken in his views" concerning the conference last Sunday in Springfield at which it was believed the question of home rule for Chicago in the matter of liquor control had been settled.

The mayor and Chicago Democratic leaders left the conference feeling that the city was to have complete powers of license. On Wednesday in Springfield, the governor's followers tried to amend the Lager house bill in a manner which would leave with the state commission the broad powers of licensing and revocation of licenses which the mayor felt were an invasion of Chicago's right to govern itself.

Wants Power for Board.

"The governor," said Mr. Kelly, "insists that the proposed commission pass on the issuance of all licenses. We in Chicago want an amendment allowing us to refuse or grant a license, leaving, of course, an appeal provision whereby one to whom we refused a license could appeal to the commission. If the governor talks to those persons who attended the conference, I am sure he will agree that that was the agreement made."

The mayor added that he had also learned that another section had been removed from the bill. As passed by the house it limited the proposed state commission to 30 employés. That provision has been stricken, the mayor learned, leaving with the commission the power to employ as many persons as it chooses—should the bill pass.

"Under the law as the governor would have it, I couldn't have closed Ald. Bauler's tavern after the shooting there on Tuesday," Mayor Kelly said. "There is no telling when a state commission, should it have revoking powers, could act. I closed the place shortly after the shooting and revoked the license as soon as I received the police report."

2,960 License Applications.

City Collector Edward J. Kaindl informed the mayor yesterday that 2,960 applications for 1934 liquor licenses had been received. At present there are about 8,300 places in the city selling drinks. Although Wednesday was set as the dead line for 1934 license applications, the collector indicated that a day or two of grace would be allowed. The fee for the first six months of 1934 is $250.

At yesterday's city council meeting, Ald. O. E. Northrup [Rep., 19th] introduced an amendment to the liquor ordinance providing for the elimination of bars and substituting a provision that drinking must be done at tables. The amendment was referred to the license committee.

The alderman based his amendment, he said, on the planks in both major party platforms which declared against a return of the saloon. The present taverns are little else than saloons, he said.

Another dry district in Chicago was added by the council at the request of Northrup. He asked that no applications for liquor licenses be granted for the territory bounded by 91st street, 119th street, and Vincennes and California avenues.

W. C. T. U. Attacks Legal Liquor.

The W. C. T. U. yesterday issued a statement declaring the first fortnight of the return of legal liquor had produced important developments. Thousands of American homes are suffering from the return of liquor, the statement declared, because "for the first time in fourteen years approximately 56,000,000 American citizens, including fathers and mothers and nearly 15,000,000 young people, have been made the legal target of high pressure liquor salesmanship."

Thousands of these young people have, in consequence, "taken the first serious step toward dissipation amid the flashing lure of the modernized barroom," the statement said. The further consequences, it continued, have been impaired judgment, diminished efficiency, depleted pocketbooks, intensification of the liabilit, to accidents "and nothing to show for it except a bad taste in the mouth and a memory of seared ideals."

FRENCH LIQUOR QUOTA TO U. S. INCREASED BY 784,000 GALLONS

Washington, D. C., Dec. 21.—(AP)—An agreement between the United States and France to expand the French liquor import quota came tonight.

Days of effort to break a deadlock over tariffs imposed on American goods to be imported into France under a reciprocal liquor trade agreement ended in a compromise. Under it France guarantees a market for 20,000 tons of American apples and pears regardless of tariffs. In exchange the United States opens its liquor import quota to an additional 784,000 gallons of the French product.

The compromise was viewed as dictated by a desire of this government to continue increasing the domestic liquor supply. This was made urgent today when it became known that the import quotas from all countries had virtually expired and that France actually had completed her exports under the original 784,000 gallon allotment.

Minnesota Senate Vetoes State, City Liquor Stores

St. Paul, Dec. 21.—(AP)—The Minnesota state senate today apparently rejected Gov. Olson's plan for a state liquor dispensary when it rejected, 42 to 22, a motion to push through the bill which also carried a provision for municipal liquor dispensaries. The state senate urged by resolution that the United States senate ratify the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence treaty.

Jewels and $111 Stolen from Widow of Author

Syracuse, N. Y., Dec. 21.—(AP)—Jewelry valued at thousands of dollars and $111 in cash were stolen from the home of Mrs. Harold MacGrath, widow of the author, while she was absent two days ago, police announced tonight. Chief among articles missing are two chrysophrase necklaces described by Mrs. MacGrath as priceless.

SEE APPROVAL OF $2 PER GALLON RUM TAX TODAY

Washington, D. C., Dec. 21.—[Special.]—A tax of $2 a gallon on liquor, with no attempt to share collections with states, and the two table tariff plan under which the President would have power to lower duties on imports from countries affording reciprocal advantages to American trade, stood tonight as the general decision of Democratic members of the ways and means committee as the basis for the liquor tax regulation to be approved for draft by the committee tomorrow.

So definite is the understanding as the result of caucusing in the majority groups that some members here for the liquor and general tax hearings will depart for home and not attend the sessions tomorrow, confident that all real points at issue have been settled.

The program in its three major details includes only one of the specific recommendations of President Roosevelt's interdepartmental liquor committee which advocated flexible tariff authority for the President to adjust the rates in favor of nations exporting wines and liquors that were willing to make reciprocal trade agreements.

Palm Springs, Cal., Dec. 21.—[Special.]—Paul Lukas, Hungarian movie star, was thrown heavily when his horse fell on the desert today. Lukas suffered a fractured collar bone.

Father Who Fell 7 Floors Given Chance to Recover

Edward Franks, 50 years old, 1309 North Clark street, a shoe merchant, who leaped from the tenth floor of a loop building Wednesday in an attempt to end his life, was given an even chance for recovery last night by physicians at St. Elizabeth's hospital, where he was taken. Plunging from the tenth floor of the Madison-La Salle building at 173 West Madison street his body struck the roof of a three story building with such force that it was lodged in the timbers. Firemen helped to extricate him. Franks said he was despondent over the illness of a son.

FRANK D. CHASE TO DIRECT CWA WORK IN ILLINOIS

Office Is Reorganized at Washington's Order.

A reorganization of the combined civil works and relief administrations in Illinois, under which Robert J. Dunham, head of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission, is relieved of many burdens growing out of CWA activities, was announced yesterday by Howard O. Hunter, field supervisor of the Civil Works administration in six midwestern states.

Under the orders which Mr. Hunter received from Washington, Frank D. Chase will become immediately executive director of the CWA in the state and Wilfred S. Reynolds, now Cook county director for the Emergency Relief commission, will be given the title of executive director of relief in Illinois.

Dunham Titular CWA Head.

Mr. Dunham remains head of the commission and will also be titular head of the CWA, although it is expected that all the executive decisions for the latter organization will be made by Mr. Chase.

"Statistical and accounting work will still be carried on for both relief and the CWA by the force now employed by the Illinois Emergency Relief," Mr. Hunter said. "We did not wish to set up two such bookkeeping groups, as one will be more economical and it is uncertain how long the CWA program will last."

It is understood that the solution is satisfactory to Mr. Dunham, whose friends reported Wednesday that he was impatient of efforts being made by politicians to gain control of the civil works spending. He is known to be of the opinion that relief and reemployment should be severed, and is said to have found much more difficulty in fighting political leaders over CWA than over the disbursement of relief funds.

Plan Approved by Horner.

This was largely due to the fact that as relief administrator Gov. Horner gave him a free hand, while the CWA has been governed by rules arbitrarily sent out from Washington. Mr. Hunter said that Gov. Horner had been informed of the new setup and had approved it.

Mr. Chase, the new reemployment head for the state, is a civil engineer and the head of Frank D. Chase, Inc., engineering concern. He has been chief of the engineering staff of the CWA since its drive to employ 231,750 idle Illinoisans was started.

LABOR INQUIRY BEGUN

An investigation into charges that there is labor union discrimination in placements on CWA jobs was announced yesterday by Mr. Dunham. A committee headed by Brig. Gen. Thomas S. Hammond, chairman of the Industrial Council of Chicago, and George W. Rossetter, president of the Association of Commerce, called upon Mr. Dunham with affidavits sworn to by nonunion workers, who charged they had been refused work on CWA projects because they did not hold union cards.

The investigation will be conducted by Benjamin F. Marshman, conciliator for the federal department of labor in this district, who has offices in the United States courthouse. Any workers who are refused employment on CWA projects because they are not union members have the right to appeal to Mr. Marshman, Mr. Dunham said.

Under the regulations of the CWA union workers who are unemployed must be given the first chance at jobs on which union labor is regularly employed, it was pointed out. After all unemployed union laborers are hired nonunion men may be hired, the rules state. However, it has been charged that union organizers attempt to force the nonunion workers to become union members before they are given work, an activity for which there is no provision in the CWA regulations.

Named CWA Director

FRANK D. CHASE.

FINDS WORKERS OF CWA SPEND PAY IN GAMING DENS

Circuit Judge T. Joseph Sullivan of Gary yesterday sent a letter to Roswell O. Johnson, mayor of that city, urging that the city administration clean up gambling and race betting establishments to prevent CWA workers from spending their pay checks there.

Judge Sullivan, who is also head of the Juvenile court, said the matter first came to his attention as a result of the requests of the families of the gambling CWA workers for extra relief because the heads of the families had lost their pay checks. An investigator found that 27 CWA pay checks were cashed by bookmakers or in gambling houses last Saturday.

Stanley Bucklind, police chief, asserted that he knew of no gambling in the city.

F. A. Niestadt, engineer in charge of CWA projects in Lake county, Ind., said the CWA was powerless to control the way its employes spent their money. If a man has qualified for a job on one of the projects he cannot be dismissed for spending his pay in a gambling house.

6 SENATORS FACE QUESTIONING ON "GHOST VOTING"

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 21.—(AP)—Alfred H. Greening, state's attorney of Sangamon county, said tonight that he had asked six state senators to appear before him for questioning about the alleged "ghost voting" in the senate a week ago.

The six senators are: Arnold P. Benson, Batavia; Frank J. Huckin Jr., Chicago; James B. Leonardo, Chicago; Dan Serritella, Chicago; James C. Mayor, Lahart, and Charles H. Thompson, Harrisburg.

In the event that these men refuse to appear, Attorney Greening said, they will be subpoenaed before the January grand jury, or if they choose to take advantage of their immunity while the legislature is in session they will be called before the first grand jury in session after the senate is adjourned again.

The alleged "ghost voting" took place before the recess a week ago, when a number of state senators voted on a measure when they were actually not present at the roll call.

WALLACE HITS BACK AT CRITICS OF MILK POLICY

Charges Large Dealers Reap Huge Profits.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 21.—[Special.]—In emphatic answer to critics of his dairy relief policies, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace today declared the AAA has no intention of enforcing local milk marketing agreements under which big dairy companies are reaping "exorbitant" profits.

"To our own knowledge" the secretary asserted in reply to an attack by Charles W. Holman, secretary of the National Milk Producers Cooperative federation, "the profits of some milk companies, including subsidiaries of big holding companies, are exorbitant to say the least."

"It is scarcely the function of a government department devoted to the interests of agriculture to scatter its resources in efforts to enforce exorbitant profits to some milk companies," he said.

Believed Aimed at Dealers Here.

Mr. Wallace declined to name any of the large milk distributors to whom he referred. But his statement, following closely the completion of an intensive federal audit of the books of large dairy companies in Chicago, gave rise to repeated reports that the secretary had Chicago distributors in mind.

The secretary's vehement declaration that the AAA has no intention of enforcing retail milk price schedules under local marketing pacts, together with his action yesterday in terminating the Chicago marketing agreement, was regarded as definite indication that the entire system of local milk agreements drawn up thus far by the AAA is to be completely revised.

The end of the Chicago agreement found officials of the AAA content, at least for the present, to observe a hands-off policy with regard to the city's milk situation. Although ready to admit that the Chicago agreement was hastily drawn and probably unenforceable, officials took the position that a solution is now up to the producers and distributors of the milk shed themselves.

Replies to Holman.

In his reply to Mr. Holman, Secretary Wallace recalled that the cooperative leader had demanded that AAA "milk marketing agreements should specify resale prices of milk and its products."

"The issue," the secretary stated," is whether a fair share of returns should go to the dairy farmers or whether a good deal of the cream of profits taken from producers and consumers should go to a few companies distributing milk."

"It should be clearly understood," he added, "that we have no interest whatever in reducing any reasonable returns made by any milk company in the United States."

Meanwhile, dairy leaders from all sections of the country were scheduled to confer with experts of the AAA tomorrow regarding a plan for controlling the production of milk.

U. S. JUDGE TAKES TEST CASE OF NRA POWERS UNDER ADVISEMENT

Freeport, Ill., Dec. 21.—(AP)—A test case of the powers of the NRA was argued before Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward today and taken under advisement.

United States District Attorney Dwight H. Green asked him to dissolve an injunction granted by an Illinois Circuit court and restraining the Chicago regional board of the NRA from intervening in a labor dispute between owners and employes of the National Lock company of Rockford.

One thousand employes walked out of the plant Aug. 21 in a strike for code conditions.

Circuit Judge Edward D. Shurtleff of Marengo granted the injunction on the plea of the lock company that the government had no right to take the case into federal court because it did not involve minimum money damages of $3,000.

Green argued that the sum involved in wage adjustments was more than $3,000 even though no specific sum of damages was mentioned in the bill, and that the action was admissible in federal court because it involved a branch of the NRA, and consequently the government.

JOHNSON URGES STATES TO FORM THEIR OWN NRA'S

Washington, D. C., Dec. 21.—[Special.]—Gen. Johnson has telegraphed all state governors asking them to set up "little" NRA's in their commonwealths.

Nine states, New York, New Jersey, Ohio, Texas, Colorado, California, Wisconsin, Utah, and Virginia, have already created state NRA organizations. In addition, Gov. Floyd Olson has recommended a state NRA to the Minnesota legislature sitting in special session.

Gen. Johnson in submitting his request advocated state NRA's as the best way of obtaining legal coöperation for the national recovery administration and for introducing NRA principles into industries which are essentially local, general coördination of activities will be improved, he believes.

Several weeks ago a Tampa, Fla., judge refused to recognize NRA rights in a case of price cutting by a cleaner and dyer because the case was not brought into court by a United States attorney and local laws did not obtain. It is such complications as this that it is desired to avoid.

SHOPLIFTERS ON RELIEF ROLL; IT ANGERS JUDGE

Municipal Judge Frederick W. Elliott became indignant yesterday when he learned that two shoplifters arraigned before him both were receiving relief for the idle.

He sentenced John Duce, 50 years old, 1533 West Walton street, to five days in the Bridewell for stealing several hats and imposed a ten day sentence on Louis Jostadt, 45 years old, 1412 Elkhorn avenue, for the theft of several pairs of gloves. Both men were arrested in a department store.

Police testified that both had previous police records. Assistant State's Attorney William J. Lancaster inquired of relief authorities and was told that the possession of a police record was no bar to receiving relief.

ENDS HIS LIFE IN HOME.

Thomas Benson, 47 years old, committed suicide with gas early yesterday in his home at 6643 South May street. Benson, a widower, left no note and his son, Fred, told police that he knew of no motive for the suicide.

SILVER IN U. S. IS REMONETIZED BY PRESIDENT

Bases Inflation on Farm Adjustment Act.

unanimously adopted the silver resolution proposed by our government, providing in substance that these governments would refrain from the policy and practice of melting up and debasing silver coins that would replace low valued paper money with silver coins; and that they would not enact legislation that would depreciate the value of silver in the world market.

"This resolution, however, was contingent upon an agreement between the government of those countries producing large quantities of silver and the governments of those countries holding or using large quantities, looking to the elimination of an unnatural oversupply of silver on the markets of the world. This agreement was of course for the purpose of allowing demand and supply to govern the price of silver by the limitation and neutralization of this oversupply derived from the melting up of silver coins.

Guarding Stabilization.

"India had the power to dispose of, on the markets of the world, at any time ,and at any price, hundreds of millions of ounces of silver. In fact, India had the power and capacity to dump silver derived from the melting up of Indian silver coins in an amount equal to the world's production from the mines, for the period of two years. This power and the uncertainty attending its execution was destructive of the value and stability of silver throughout the world.

"China agreed, during the period of four years commencing Jan. 1, 1934, and ending Jan. 1, 1938, not to permit the sale of any silver derived from the debasing or melting up of silver coins. India agreed to limit the sales of such silver to a maximum of 35 million ounces annually during such period, and Spain agreed not to sell in excess of 5,000,000 ounces of such silver annually during such period. After such sales, these governments are to be bound by the general resolution adopted at the London conference to which I have heretofore referred.

Limitation Applied to U. S.

"As a condition of the agreement by China, India, and Spain, however, it was required that Australia, Canada, Mexico, Peru, and the United States should take silver from the production of their respective mines to the gross amount of 35,000,000 ounces annually for such period of four years. The United States, by reason of its large population and its large silver production, agreed to take from its mines annually at least 24,421,410 ounces of silver during such period."

President Roosevelt expressly directed that the silver which is left in the government's hands as a result of its 50 per cent coinage charge shall be stored in the treasury's vaults. No provision for paying it out, as some inflationists advocate, was made.

In Effect to Dec. 31, 1937.

Power to revoke his entire proclamation or any part of it if its continuance is found not to be in the interest of the United States was specifically reserved by the President. Otherwise the silver program is to remain in effect until Dec. 31, 1937, the period during which the London silver pact is binding.

Regulations for effecting the program and especially for defining and determining newly mined silver, the President directed, are to be issued by Acting Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr.

The President's silver proclamation came at the end of a day in which Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, had revealed that the cost of trying to force the world gold price up to the level of the American price, in accordance with the President's gold program, was becoming more and more costly.

The RFC, which is doing the gold buying, has spent at least 60 million dollars abroad, of which about 25 millions has been poured out in the last week, Mr. Jones indicated. Another 17 millions has been spent buying domestic gold and the RFC has had to allot a total of 100 million dollars to its gold buying fund, he declared.

U. S. First Coined Standard Silver Dollar 141 Years Ago

New York, Dec. 21.—[Special.]—The free coinage of silver on terms that will yield producers about 64½ cents an ounce is in a ratio of 53 to 1 to the current price of $34.06 an ounce paid by the RFC for newly mined gold. This is a far cry from the ratio of 16 to 1, made famous by William Jennings Bryan in 1896, and kept alive from time to time by the faithful little group of silver senators.

The 16 to 1 battle cry of the free silverites meant simply a fixed value for silver at one sixteenth the value of gold. Under such a ratio silver producers could carry their metal to the mint and receive for every sixteen ounces the value of one ounce of gold.

Propose Higher Ratio for Silver.

On the basis of the current RFC gold price of $34.06 at sixteen to one would mean a price of about $2.13 an ounce for silver, or far above the prevailing market price of 43 cents. Since Bryan's day silver advocates have often proposed a much higher ratio for silver to gold, but as recently as last April Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana introduced a bill to remonetize silver at the classic ratio of 16 to 1, which secured such support that it was credited with forcing the government to suspend the gold standard.

Upon the establishment of the mint in 1792, the government authorized the coining of standard silver dollars. However, between 1805 and 1836, the coinage ceased, because the price of silver was greater than the value of silver in the standard silver dollar. In 1837 the present standard silver dollar of 412½ grains was established and its coinage authorized.

During the civil war an inconvertible paper currency had been introduced, but the United States in 1873 formally established the gold dollar as the standard coin. This was known among the silverites as "the crime of '73," since silver money virtually was outlawed.

In 1878 a further coinage of the standard silver dollar was authorized, but a change was made in its legal tender character. By an act then it was made legal tender, "except where otherwise expressly stipulated in the contract."

First Silver Certificates.

Under this act the first issue of silver certificates was made, which provided for the deposit of standard silver dollars in the treasury and the issue in lieu thereof of silver certificates. At the present time there are outstanding silver certificates in the amount of approximately $490,000,000 secured by almost 500,000,000 standard silver dollars.

Under the Pittman act of April 23, 1918, approximately 260,000,000 standard silver dollars were melted down and the 200,000,000 ounces of silver they contained were sold to the government of India at $1 an ounce, plus a charge to cover the cost of melting and other incidentals in connection therewith. In May, 1920, when the price of silver dropped to $1 a ounce, the United States government reacquiring the silver sold to India. This was completed in June, 1923. The recoinage of the silver dollars melted was completed in April, 1928.

The currency situation now is the same as before the passage of the Pittman act, so far as operations under this act are concerned. The monetary stock of United States silver dollars was neither decreased nor increased by that act.

SILVER PROGRAM AIDS FAR EAST AND WESTERN U.S.

Benefits Producers and Standard Nations.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 21.—[Special.]—Two groups stood out tonight as the chief beneficiaries of President Roosevelt's silver program, the silver producing states of the far west and the silver standard nations of the far east.

To the silver states the President's ordered price of 64½ cents an ounce for silver means a gain of 19 cents on each ounce of silver they produce. In terms of an annual production of 24,000,000 ounces, this gain will amount to more than 4½ million dollars a year.

To the silver standard countries of the far east whose currencies depend upon the ratio of silver to gold for their international value, the silver program means an arbitrary boost of 42 per cent in terms of American money because of the boost in silver prices in terms of gold.

Political Beneficiary.

By meeting the demands of the silver states and of a part of the inflationist bloc in congress, President Roosevelt himself becomes one of the chief beneficiaries of the move, political observers here pointed out tonight.

Four-fifths of the silver produced in the United States comes from the six states of Utah, Idaho, Montana, Arizona, Colorado, and Nevada, and it is to the mining companies of these states that the majority of the 4½ million dollar increased profit which the President's price makes possible will go.

Capable of producing many times the 24,000,000 ounces annually which the President intimated he intends to buy, these states, by bringing abandoned mines back into production, may force the President to cease silver purchases after the 24,000,000 ounces required by the London treaty are bought.

Improves Exchange Relationship.

Improvement of the exchange relationship between the dollar and far eastern silver currencies, principally those of India and China, has been one of the major arguments of the silver bloc in congress.

The steadily falling of silver has carried down with it the value in terms of gold of the far eastern currencies. Thus a Chinese merchant, the silver advocates argued, has had to use an increasing number of Shanghai silver dollars to buy the American gold dollar.

If a full 42 per cent increase in silver prices which President Roosevelt ordered today carries over into the relationship between the American dollar and the Chinese currencies, a Shanghai merchant, who yesterday had to spend three of his Chinese dollars in order to get one American dollar, will have to spend only two.

This depreciation of the American dollar, in terms of far eastern silver currencies, is expected to permit merchants in that section of the world to buy more American products whose prices in foreign currencies fall as the dollar falls.

SEE HUEY LONG PROSECUTION ON U. S. TAX CHARGE

Report He Failed to List Fees.

up to the point of submission to a federal grand jury.

But as the story is now told, Mr. Hoover and his advisers felt it would be bad political strategy to announce a prosecution of Long during the heat of an election, so the matter was delayed.

Report on Woodin's Desk.

During the time that Mr. Woodin was actively in direction of the treasury department it was reported that a full report of Senator Long's case had been laid on his desk. But no action was taken upon it.

Then the President put Mr. Morgenthau in charge, and since then there has been a new hum at the treasury. It has been learned that the department will go vigorously after income tax dodgers; that attempts to settle income tax claims by the government will be met with demands for the full sums due.

Today Mr. Morgenthau smilingly evaded direct questions on the Long case, but he did state his new policy.

"After I came in" he said, "I told Mr. Irey [Elmer L. Irey, chief of the intelligence unit of the internal revenue bureau] to investigate all cases in which he thought the government had been defrauded, and to let the chips fall where they may.

"I told him to go ahead and not to consult me. I will not discuss any cases that are being investigated by the department. Mr. Irey was instructed to investigate all cases he thinks need investigating and does not have to come to me for consultation."

Senator Long has been hitting the skids for some months, and to some degree his new troubles date back to the time he was popped in the nose by an unnamed gladiator in an exclusive country club at Sands Point, Long Island. His vulnerability thus exposed, Mr. Long began to feel the brunt of opposition in his own political organization in Louisiana, which culminated yesterday with the announcement by Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley of New Orleans that he had definitely broken with Long. Other former Long men have followed suit.

HOW SILVER COINAGE PLAN WILL WORK UNDER NEW ORDER

Washington, D. C., Dec. 21.—(AP)—An explanation of how the silver coinage plan would work, as outlined tonight, was:

A silver producer would take his metal—say 100 ounces—to the mint. Taking the silver at its value as fixed in relation to gold, the mint would convert his 100 ounces of silver into $64.50 of coins. The full theoretical value of the metal would be $129. Half of this the government would keep.

At this rate, compared with the present price of about 43 cents an ounce for silver, the producer, despite the fact that the government took half of his metal for a minting charge, would stand to gain $21.50 on his hundred ounces of metal—the difference between the $64.50 his metal was minted into and the $43 the hundred ounces would bring on the present market.

SILVER ACTION PROVES A JOLT TO WALL STREET

New York, Dec. 21.—[Special.]—The financial community was jolted out of its pre-holiday lethargy tonight by the startling news of President Roosevelt's proclamation authorizing free coinage of newly mined silver.

The news created more of a stir in the street than anything since the announcement of the gold purchase program. Arriving long after the markets had closed, it sent foreign exchange and silver experts back to their offices and telephones for hasty communication with their correspondents abroad. Uncertain how to interpret the immediate market significance, many of them canceled all outstanding orders abroad.

Bankers, dealers, and economists expressed uncertainty over both the immediate and remote consequences of the action. Silver producers were jubilant and traders hopeful. The Wall street inflation contingent hailed the news as of more far reaching significance than even the gold buying plan, announced on Oct. 22.

3 Sued for Tax on Bootleg Fuel Income

Carter Harrison, collector of internal revenues, yesterday filed income tax liens totaling $22,000 against Max Johnson, his brother, Al L. Johnson, and Frank Jeller, proprietors of the Consumers Gas and Oil company, 4433 West Congress street. The liens represent penalty, tax, and interest on unreported income. The income is said to have been realized in the sale of bootleg gasoline on which the state tax was not paid.

IDENTIFY RAIL VICTIM.

The body of a man killed early yesterday when he was struck by a Chicago and Alton train at State street in Lemont was identified as that of John McCann, 54 years old, 4852 North Keeler avenue.

CRUSADER CHIEF WARNS OF PERIL IN INFLATION

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 21.—(AP)—Fred C. Clark, commander of the Crusaders, declared at a massmeeting here tonight: "The practical thing to do today is to improve the use of the gold standard, not to attempt to abolish it."

Clark, who came here from New York, was one of several speakers appearing on a program sponsored by the Crusaders, a prohibition repeal group which embraced the anti-inflation movement.

"Country after country has at one time or another tried the costly experiment of inflated paper money, only to have it collapse and bring general ruin," he asserted.

Clark said that "to attribute bad loans and bad banking practices to a gold standard currency is to be untrue to the facts."

SIMON HECKLED IN COMMONS ON FOREIGN POLICY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 21.—Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, was heckled in the house of commons today on the present condition of foreign affairs.

Sir John, however, parried his tormentors' questions by saying that delicate negotiations now are going on and that this is no time to talk about them in public. The foreign affairs chief left later in the day on his continental trip, during which he plans to see French and Italian statesmen.

The queries included requests for information on the present position with Germany, about whether Mussolini has made any concrete suggestions for reform of the league of nations, as to the present condition of the disarmament question, and as to what is being done about the far west.

Sir Austen Chamberlain, former foreign secretary, while not pressing for premature disclosures, urged that a definite British foreign policy be formulated and announced as soon as possible. He also said that the covenant of the league should not be treated as sacrosanct.

Girl Denies Shooting; Union Official Freed

Municipal Judge Jay A. Schiller yesterday dismissed a charge of assault with intent to kill against Edwin Islander, business agent for the Brewery Drivers and Helpers' union, growing out of the shooting Sept. 17 of Miss Helen Boatman, 22 years old, 1633 Melrose avenue. Miss Boatman, sweetheart of Islander, told police at the time that he had shot her, but swore in court yesterday that she had wounded herself while examining his gun.

PLAN U. S. LOANS FOR REBUILDING OF FARM HOMES

Census Will Be Taken to List Prospects.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 21.—[Special.]—The new farm deal will shortly find the federal government extending easy money loans to farmers throughout the country who desire to rebuild or modernize their homes.

A gigantic federal corporation to finance farm home renovation and rehabilitation on the most liberal credit terms is being worked out by experts of the department of agriculture, it was learned today. A census of farm dwellers to ascertain the prospects of the proposed corporation is to be undertaken by the civil works administration.

Wide Range Is Covered.

The project, sponsored originally by the agriculture department, contemplates the extension of easy federal credit for every type of farm home reconditioning, or for complete rebuilding. The project sheet, outlining the nature of the information to be gathered by the census enumerators, together with a detailed blank for recording the information, discloses that loans are contemplated for the addition of rooms, and for the repair, replacement, or installation of such facilities as electric refrigeration, electric lights, new plumbing, and landscaping.

The census workers, of whom 5,000 are expected to be recruited under the CWA, are instructed in the project sheet to obtain "some idea of willingness to have any or all of these facilities installed, if provided on liberal credit with amortization."

Under the plan, as outlined in the project sheet, the government would buy materials necessary for prosecution of the program and contract with private concerns for the work.

Object Is Outlined.

"The object" of the census of farm dwellers, is outlined as follows:

"To measure the potential demand for improved facilities, to determine cost of providing such facilities, to develop plans for installation of same with standard specifications adapted to needs of typical sections, and to develop plans for financing their provisions, as a preliminary step in developing a public works program for improvement of the farm home and its equipment."

The nature of the projected corporation was revealed in the following questions which the census workers are instructed to ask farm dwellers:

"Is money available from local credit sources to finance house construction, repairs, or improvements?

"Would you be interested in borrowing money to finance construction, repairs, or improvements provided interest rate is satisfactory and repayments can be distributed over a period of ten years?

"How much would you desire to borrow?

"What would you consider a satisfactory rate of interest?"

Improvements Are Listed.

The nature of the work which the federal government contemplates financing was indicated by the following list, contained in the census questionnaire:

"House repairs and improvements, water system, sanitary facilities, lighting system, heating system, bathroom equipment, laundry facilities, cooking facilities, landscaping, electricity, built-in equipment and furnishings."

The questionnaire included a request for information as to which of these items the farmer would use the money on if he had $500, $250, or $100.

HUSBAND, WIFE FOUND SHOT TO DEATH IN HOME

Tampa, Fla., Dec. 21.—(AP)—L. H. Thomas, 70, and his wife were found dead in their apartment here today after neighbors heard three shots. Mrs. Thomas was shot twice in the head as she lay in bed. Her husband was shot once in the head, and near his body on the floor lay a pistol.

Justice of the Peace Leo Walters said the deaths were a murder and suicide. He said no inquest was necessary. Floyd I. Thomas, a son living here, said he knew of no motive for the tragedy. The couple had been living here about five years.

Besides the son, survivors include a daughter, Mrs. Eula Martinson of Chicago. Thomas also is survived by two brothers J. C. Thomas, Chicago and J. O. Thomas, Peoria, Ill., and a sister, Miss Lou Thomas of Pekin, Ill., Mrs. Thomas is survived by a sister, Mrs. Georgia Parks, Minneapolis, Minn., and two brothers, Hubert Ingersoll and Charles Ingersoll, Pekin, Ill.

ENJOINS UNION FROM PICKETING IN SPITE OF LAW

Judge Denis E. Sullivan yesterday issued an injunction restraining members of the Upholsterers' International union, locals 12 and 118, from picketing the plants of furniture manufacturers in Chicago against whom a strike has been in effect since mid-September.

The judge also held that a law passed in 1925 by the state legislature providing that no such injunctions to restrain picketeers should be issued was unconstitutional. He certified the order to the Supreme court for review.

It was said that his opinion of the constitutionality was based on the alleged fact that the state law was discriminatory, in that certain classes of persons—employers especially—could not under it go to the courts for relief guaranteed to all by the constitution.

Attorney Lewis F. Jacobson represented the furniture manufacturers.

Disfranchised for 50 Years After Conviction for Fraud

TVA TO ORGANIZE ELECTRIC HOME, FARM AUTHORITY

Shoals Sales Unit Will Be Incorporated.

New York, Dec. 21.—[Special.]—Incorporation papers for the Electric Home and Farm Authority, an agency designed to promote the use of electricity in the Tennessee valley, will be filed in Delaware the first week in January, David E. Lilienthal, director of the Tennessee Valley Authority, announced here today.

Mr. Lilienthal also explained the manner in which the government will carry on its promotional work through the EHFA, a subsidiary of the valley authority.

To electrify sections of the seven states in the area—to utilize the vast excess of electricity, existing and potential, in the area—the EHFA will cooperate with the utility companies, manufacturers of electrical appliances, and dealers.

Seeks Rate Reductions.

It is seeking substantial reductions on rates from the power companies operating in the valley, Mr. Lilienthal said, so that consumers will be enabled to electrify their homes at comparatively low cost.

Mr. Lilienthal said he was negotiating with manufacturers to obtain substantially reduced prices for their products.

"A vacuum cleaner, electric iron and electric stove in every possible home in the valley is our immediate goal," said Mr. Lilienthal.

He estimated that the operations of the EHFA would result in the valley in 1934, and that dealer business would be stimulated an additional $10,000,000.

TVA Is Guarantor.

The guarantor of the dealers in the region would be the valley authority, with $10,000,000 in credit extended to it by the RFC. It would not be necessary to touch that reserve, however Mr. Lilienthal said.

Mr. Lilienthal said he hoped to have all negotiations with manufacturers completed prior to the incorporation of the new agency shortly after the first of the year.

The move will be the federal government's first one in its campaign to electrify the nation, the director explained.

In the Tennessee valley the amount of electricity generated by the Muscle Shoals plant, the Wilson dam, and other plants exceeded by 40 per cent that used, he said.

Mr. Lilienthal declared that the whole step was in the nature of a giant experiment.

"The Tennessee valley is the laboratory," he said. "The success of the project will determine whether it will be extended to other sections."

Malufacturing concerns which will supply the electric appliances must be members of the NRA, Mr. Lilienthal emphasized, adding that there would be no discrimination toward the utility companies.

Site of Highway

The broad pavements of Randolph street, in the market district between Union park and Des Plaines street, are being used as an unregulated free parking lot, blocking traffic as effectively as the produce wagons and farmers' trucks that have business in the market.

This wide section of Randolph street is the site for the first section of Chicago's elevated highway system for which the state highway department is preparing plans. The plans call for an elevated pavement that will incidentally serve as a roof for the marketing business that has remained in Randolph while other merchants have moved to the new South Water market.

Pending completion of the elevated highway, nearby Washington boulevard is blocked with congestion and motorists can not use Randolph street to avoid the boulevard blockades because of the unregulated parking of private automobiles in the market district.

Artist Burroughs Wins Divorce and 2 Children

Studley Oldham Burroughs, 1456 Fargo avenue, a commercial artist, won an uncontested divorce on charges of infidelity from Mrs. Alice Armstrong Burroughs yesterday before Circuit Judge Daniel P. Trude. He and his father, Henry Burroughs testified that on Dec. 16 they went with police to the studio of Lowell Johnston, 170 East Superior street, at 2 a. m., where they found Johnston and Mrs. Burroughs, she clad only in a sheet. Burroughs was granted the custody of two children.

U.S. TAKES ACTION TO SPEED LOANS BY ILLINOIS HOLC

Moves to End Favoritism in Insurance.

BY AL CHASE.

As a result of finding an almost complete lack of system in the Illinois offices of the Home Owners' Loan corporation, which until a few days ago were under the management of William G. Donne, the Washington investigators delving into the affairs of the office announced yesterday that a new and faster system of procedure would be installed today.

William H. McNeal, special representative of the board of directors of the HOLC in Washington, stated that he had recently installed this system in New York, where he had found even slower progress than in Chicago.

Aim to End Favoritism.

Simultaneously with the disclosure that the making of loans would be expedited, Mr. McNeal announced that bulletins were issued yesterday which stop the favoritism and delay in both insurance and repair matters. In each bulletin HOLC employés are notified that the home owner is to decide as to who shall insure his home and who shall repair it.

Mr. McNeal stated that from now on the vast flood of applications for home loans will be separated into five classes as fast as they are received, in order to speed the granting of loans.

Actual "distress" cases—those in which home owners face immediate foreclosure—will be designated as type A, and will receive immediate attention. They will be sent to the appraisers with orders to rush them as much as possible. Red stickers with the word "rush" will be affixed to these applications.

Other Types of Cases.

Type B cases will be those good loans which do not require emergency action.

Type C cases will be those which apparently are slow and where questions of mortgage consent and title and other factors indicate that time will be required for weighing the applications.

Type D are those which have inadequate security and will be handled by experts who understand the working out of difficult cases and are competent to advise home owners on the best method of getting relief.

The last class is type E, which includes those cases which clearly do not fall under the terms of the act.

Provision on Insurance.

The two bulletins issued yesterday by Mr. McNeal, effective at once, specify that the home owner may buy his insurance from any insurance company, provided it is satisfactory to the HOLC. No active insurance shall be cancelled and no new insurance policy shall overlap another.

"The fee appraiser must specify what repairs are needed in his judgment to preserve the property from immediate deterioration," the repair bulletin states. "He shall not concern himself with the cost nor make any recommendation as to cost."

The home owner will be asked to submit at least two bids on necessary work. If he prefers to he may do the work himself, charging only for the materials used.

The HOLC offices will be closed tomorrow and on Christmas day.

Mr. McNeal last night announced that so much time had been lost in answering questions of mortgagors and mortgagees as to the status of their applications that while the present staff is being enlarged and the procedure changed, no more queries will be answered. He added, however, that whenever foreclosure or eviction is imminent, emergency treatment will be given in such cases.

ADVERTISE IN THE TRIBUNE

SEEK TO BREAK DEADLOCK OVER TRANSIT MERGER

1st Mortgage Bondholders Meet with Fisher.

At a conference yesterday with Attorney Walter L. Fisher, representatives of the first mortgage bondholders of the surface and elevated lines resumed their efforts to reach an accord on a traction reorganization plan. Some agreement among the conflicting financial interests, which have been deadlocked for six weeks, must be reached before Jan. 31, 1934, the final date for acceptance by the companies of the traction merger ordinance.

Attorney Fisher was appointed coordinator by the federal court to bring the security holders into an accord on a new financial setup for the merged system. At the close of yesterday's conference Mr. Fisher refused to admit that any progress had been made.

Two of his conferees, however, Frank M. Gordon, representing the surface line bondholders, and Sidney L. Castle, who appeared for the rapid transit [elevated] security holders, announced that they would meet this morning to thresh out their differences. If progress is made at their meeting they will report to Attorney Fisher at another conference set for this afternoon.

Traylor Attends Conference.

Others who took part in yesterday's discussion were Melvin A. Traylor, president of the First National bank and chairman of the first mortgage bondholders' committee of the Chicago City Railways company [south side surface lines]; Attorney Henry F. Tenney, counsel for the first mortgage bondholders' committee of the Chicago Railways company [north and west side surface lines], and D. F. Kelly, chairman of the first mortgage bondholders' committee of the Rapid Transit lines.

Until yesterday the negotiations had been carried on by correspondence between the opposing financial groups with Mr. Fisher acting as intermediary.

About a week ago two new demands were laid down by A. W. Harris, chairman of the Chicago Railway company bondholders' committee, and Mr. Traylor as to a reorganization plan. These demands were rejected by Mr. Kelly's committee. The demands were that the first mortgage bondholders of the surface lines be given a second mortgage lien on the street car and elevated properties, and that the first mortgage bonds of the surface lines be given a position superior to those of the "L" company until the present outstanding bonds of the surface lines are amortized.

$76,000,000 Face Value.

These bonds total approximately $76,000,000 face value. Under the terms demanded there would be created a sinking fund of $1,000,000 a year from the receipts of the merged systems for the retirement of those bonds.

At the conference yesterday the discussion was general and did not reach an interchange of thought on these points, Mr. Fisher said. They are to be considered at today's meetings, he added. In response to a query as to the prospects for an early agreement Attorney Fisher said:

"I am neither a prophet nor the son of a prophet, and my clairvoyant is off duty. We have yet to get over the hurdles which have been blocking the negotiations."

Earlier in the day Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson conferred with Mr. Traylor and Mr. Harris. The traction properties, all of which are in receivership, are under Judge Wilkerson's jurisdiction. At a recent court hearing Judge Wilkerson indicated that he would stop payment of interest on the first mortgage bonds of the surface lines unless a reorganization plan is accepted.

BERWYN GETS PATROL WAGON; CHIEF A RED FACE

Berwyn's new police patrol was in active service yesterday, and how. The delivery Wednesday afternoon was made the occasion of a considerable ceremony, with the full police force of the suburb drawn up with stars shining brightly to welcome it in front of the city hall. There Chief Regan, Ald. Rudolph Docauer, George Shmid president of the Berwyn Taxpayers association, and James Stonich, agent for the company which sold the vehicle, were locked in the prisoners' compartment as the first passengers.

Policeman Tony Weber drove them proudly to the police station, dismounted in style, and stepped to the rear door to unlock it. He felt first in one pocket, then in another. All he found was a hole through which the key to the door had trickled during his drive.

From within the wagon Chief Regan assigned the entire detective force to the search for the key. After 45 minutes it was found at the curb where Weber had dismounted, and the official prisoners were released.

QUIRK DOESN'T KEEP PROMISE; BOND FORFEITED

Martin Quirk, former south side beer hoodlum, failed to appear in person or by proxy yesterday in the Felony court and his bond of $2,000 was forfeited by Judge Jay A. Schiller. Quirk, at a hearing a week ago, agreed to leave Chicago in return for the state's action of dismissing a vagrancy charge against him. The judge agreed to the arrangement on the condition that Quirk send a representative to court today with information that the hoodlum had left Chicago never to return.

Mrs. Emily Buthman, 2320 North Harding avenue, charged yesterday before Judge Rudolph F. Desort that a week after Henry C. Buthman, a city fireman, had rescued a woman in a fire the woman's husband caught him in their apartment. Buthman also had a habit of returning home with women's garters and silk hose in his pockets, she charged. Judge Desort indicated that he would grant a decree. Mrs. Buthman's bill, filed in the Superior court by Attorney Harry X. Cole, charged intoxication.

SEABURY RAPS FARLEY CALL ON JIMMY WALKER

"Disgusting," He Says to Reporters.

New York, Dec. 21.—[Special.]—The visit that Postmaster General James A. Farley paid to former Mayor James J. Walker in Paris earlier this month was described today as "a disgusting spectacle" by Samuel Seabury, the man principally responsible for Mr. Walker's resignation.

Seabury returned from Europe on the Empress of Britain of the Canadian Pacific line. He was welcomed at the pier by Mayor Elect Fiorello H. La Guardia, whose candidacy he strongly supported in the last election. The mayor elect was the first person to go up the gang plank and greet Mr. Seabury as the ship docked.

"It was not an edifying sight to see the postmaster general of the United States make a pilgrimage to meet Walker," Seabury said. "Take this as you like it. I think it was a disgusting spectacle."

Postmaster General Farley met the former mayor in Paris on Dec. 8. Farley and Walker had known each other at least twenty years.

Seabury showed further irritation for Mr. Farley had said, on reaching Europe, that he had paid for his steamship and railway transportation, realizing that Mr. Seabury was in Europe.

Asked if he had heard that Mr. Walker and his wife, the former Betty Compton, expected to return to this country, Seabury replied: "I will have to refer you to the postmaster general."

BIG GAME HUNTER FINDS TRACKS OF 'SEA MONSTER'

Locates Spoor of 20 Foot Beast in Scotland.

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Dec. 21.—M. A. Wetherell, African big game hunter, has found, according to the Daily Mail, a definite spoor of an amphibian on the shores of Loch Ness, the region from which stories of a remarkable "prehistoric sea monster" have emanated lately.

"It is a four fingered beast," Weatherell says, "and has feet, or pads, about eight inches across. I should judge it to be a very powerful soft footed animal, about 20 feet long. The spoor I found clearly shows the undulations of pads and the outlines of claws or nails."

The spoor, Wetherell declares, was only a few hours old and bore evidence that the animal had attempted to climb the gravel bank and slipped back.

Accounts Meet Skepticism.

First accounts of eye-witnesses who claimed to have seen a strange "prehistoric sea monster" floating about in the closed waters of the Scottish loch came last August and met with considerable skepticism. Since then scores of residents near the loch have reported seeing the "monster."

Lieutenant Commander R. T. Gould, retired British naval officer, who in 1930 published a book, "Case for the Sea Serpent," stated in a copyrighted article in the London Times that after surveying the evidence he had become convinced that "Loch Ness contains at least one specimen of the rarest and least known of all living creatures."

"A preliminary analysis of the data," Commander Gould writes, suggests the following conclusions: "The 'monster' has a length of at least 50 feet, with a maximum diameter of about five feet. The neck and tail are long and tapering. The head is comparatively small, not much larger than the neck, which can be elevated to a considerable height above the water.

Suggests It's a Newt.

"A small ridge, darker in color, runs along the crest of the back. There are small appendages, possibly gills, at the sides of the head where it joins the neck. Finally there are at least two and possibly four propelling fins or paddles.

"On the whole, despite the advocates of a 'surviving plesiosaurus,' this and other 'sea serpent' cases suggest to me nothing so much as a vastly enlarged, long necked, marine form of the common newt. However, that is a matter for a competent zoologist."

Attempts to kill the creature have already been made, the account states, "happily without success." Commander Gould expresses the hope that parliament will pass legislation protecting the "monster."

THERE IS STILL TIME TO BE A GOOD FELLOW

Just Phone Headquarters at Superior 0100.

The reader who has searched in today's TRIBUNE and failed to find a Good Fellow blank to fill out need not be discouraged. He still has time to be a Good Fellow. He may call Superior 0100, ask for Good Fellow headquarters, any time before noon tomorrow, and in reply the name and address of a family in need of a Good Fellow will be mailed to him by special delivery.

Or he may call in person any time before 6 o'clock Sunday night at THE TRIBUNE Public Service bureau, Madison and Dearborn streets, Good Fellow headquarters, and there receive the name and address of some family which has been investigated and found to be receiving only the bare necessities of life. The first name and the age of each child in the family will be provided.

An Unselfish Christmas.

Filling his basket as he pleases, the Good Fellow then can go to sleep Christmas eve with the assurance he will not have a bleak, or lonely, or selfish Christmas on the morrow. He will be guaranteed not to feel surfeited with too much luxury if he precedes his own turkey dinner by a trip to a poor home which without his contribution would be bare of Christmas cheer.

If he is of modest means he will feel the luxury of generosity by taking a basket to one with less than he, and can return feeling himself a prince of good fellows.

Late yesterday the Good Fellow department manager received a caller. She was a smartly dressed young woman who surprised the manager when she told him that she was the person Mr. Dickens would be looking for were he alive today and searching for the modern counterpart of Scrooge.

Bars Sentiment at Christmas.

"I'm not rich, but I'm not poor," she said. "I'm just one of the many who determined not to be sentimental about Christmas this year. I decided I wouldn't spend a cent on any one, and that I wouldn't let the Christmas spirit 'get' me.

"When I walked from my office past the Tribune Tower to my suburban train I closed my ears to the sound of Christmas carols. At home, I turned off the radio when a choir began to sing 'Noël.' On the street in the loop I hastened past the Salvation Army women who rang their bells endlessly over their iron pots.

"I didn't even look in toy windows. I stayed away from toy departments. When I saw Christmas trees for sale, or holly wreaths or poinsettia plants, it made me angry. I tried not to see them, or the happy little family groups weighted down with packages and children.

"I thought, 'I'm modern. I'm efficient, I'm even considered sort of intellectual; then why be a sap and feel lonely or niggardly if I spend Christmas alone, spending my money on myself instead of others?'

But It Didn't Work.

"Well," she concluded, "it was a good theory, but it didn't work."

She tapped the toe of one foot on the floor and glanced away.

"Nothing particular happened," she said, "but I just found out that I can't hold out any longer. Please don't tell me I'm too late to be a Good Fellow."

She was given the name of a woman with five children and their address. Before she departed the Good Fellow headquarters' manager assured her she would not be bored when she reached this family's home. The girl walked out with a springy step to do her shopping for her Good Fellow family.

She Longs for Visit from Good Fellow

This little girl may not have a happy Christmas unless some person enrolls as a Tribune Good Fellow and delivers her destitute family a basket. There is still plenty of time to join.

FATHER REGAINS SOUTH BEND BOY TAKEN BY EX-WIFE

James H. Coleman Jr., 6 years old, was returned to the custody of his father and his home in South Bend after two hearings yesterday in Chicago courts.

The boy's mother, Mrs. Ilo Blumenthal, 27 years old, 6383 Sheridan road, went to South Bend and carried away the boy a week ago. Coleman had her arrested on a fugitive warrant charging child stealing, and yesterday Municipal Judge Alfred O. Erickson dismissed the warrant and allowed the mother to retain the custody of the boy.

From his courtroom, however, the principals in the affair went before Circuit Judge Stanley H. Klarkowski, where Coleman had filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus for the boy. After Judge Klarkowski had been informed that Coleman was granted custody of the boy by the Circuit court at South Bend in 1931 when he divorced Mrs. Blumenthal on charges of adultery, he issued the writ. Mrs. Blumenthal has remarried since her divorce.

Mate Goes to Farm and Leaves Her; Wins Decree

Mrs. Nellie Haag, 518 East 71st street, a beauty parlor operator, liked city life, but her husband, Floyd, was enamored of the country, she told Circuit Judge Daniel P. Trude yesterday. Haag bought a farm near Bensenville and when she refused to go there with him, left her on March 15, 1932, she charged. Judge Trude told her attorney, Harry X. Cole, to draft a divorce decree. Mrs. Haag waived her joint tenancy in the farm.

JUDGE TO LAUNCH INVESTIGATION OF CAR THEFT RATES

Gutknecht to Quesion Insurance Men.

BY HAL FOUST.

Municipal Judge John Gutknecht of the Boys' court indicated yesterday that he is aiming at a general investigation of the automobile thefts in Chicago that have boosted insurance rates to ten times the amount charged in Milwaukee.

Representatives of four insurance companies have been directed to appear before the judge this morning to explain the companies' bills of chassis sales that have been recovered from an alleged "fence" for stolen parts and accessories. The companies are the Chicago Motor club, T. H. Mastin & Co., T. J. Houston & Co., and the Michigan Avenue Motor Sales company.

According to his reported confession, Herbert Ellingham, 39 years old, 517 West 75th street, purchased stripped automobiles from insurance companies and reëquipped them with parts from stolen cars.

Force of Public Opinion.

"I want to get all insurance companies into court," Judge Gutknecht said, "to explain why they sell chasses to 'fences' who employ young boys to steal cars to supply parts for the chasses. I haven't been able to get any coöperation from the insurance men in the past, but maybe the force of public opinion will compel them to answer some questions.

"The insurance companies, the crime commission, and the police have been trying to place all the blame for Chicago's automobile theft scandal upon the shoulders of the young boys, who are merely tools. I want to get at the bottom of this ring.

"I am convinced that the answer to the question whether Chicago can purge itself of this clever auto theft ring is the establishment of a new auto detail. The detail now in existence is only a department to harass the poor penniless kids that come before me.

Trail Boy Thieves.

"It seems to me that if this detail, consisting of eight sergeants and some seventy patrolmen, were used instead to trail the boys they find tampering with cars, and in that way act as leaders for the department in locating the actual fences, it would serve a much better cause."

Judge Gutknecht has been criticized by the Chicago crime commission and others for leniency toward youthful automobile thieves.

"I also want to ask the insurance companies if they have boosted rates in 1933 while 6,500 less cars were being stolen than in 1932, and while they were paying high dividends to stockholders," the judge went on.

Fail to Coöperate.

"In the numerous cases involving insured automobiles that have been before me in the last year only four insurance men have entered my court. In one of these cases it transpired that the owner of an automobile had hired the boy defendant to steal the car so as to collect insurance. The insurance company refused to sign a complaint against its policyholder."

More information on the operation of "fences" was disclosed yesterday by Assistant State's Attorney Morris L. Meyers, who is assigned to Judge Gutknecht's court. He disclosed the confessions of three mechanics employed at salaries of $15 to $18 a week to dismantle stolen automobiles.

Seize Three in Raid.

The three were arrested in a raid on the American Construction company, 115 East 30th street, where police found equipment for altering numbers on motors and chasses. They gave their names as Vincent Powell, 24 years old, and Buster Garner, 22, both of 1830 West Chicago avenue, and Oscar Rich, 21, 7150 Normal avenue. Martin Levy and Louis Bloomburg were arrested as the proprietors.

The five will be arraigned on Jan. 4 on charges of tampering and changing motor numbers, receiving stolen property, and automobile larceny.

SANTA CLAUS SENDS NOTES TO CHILDREN FROM HEADQUARTERS

Santa Claus, Ind., Dec. 21.—(AP)—A letter from Santa Claus is on its way to every child in the world who wrote to him here this year.

He is telling some of them that they must not expect too much in their stockings next Monday morning, for Santa too has felt the pressure of hard times.

But he believes the little boys and girls might be willing to forego a few presents just to get a real letter from him.

It took a lot of ink, much time, and many helping hands from the folks around Santa Claus' headquarters here to answer the thousands of letters from children in a half dozen countries.

The task is done, however, so every child who wrote to Santa here this year is assured of at least one thing—the personal greeting of the mythical saint himself.

The official Santa Claus at headquarters here this year is Eugene C. Wharf of Vincennes, Ind., a trustee of the Indiana state sanitarium at Rockville, Ind. He has been helping the veteran postmaster, James F. Martin, in his heavy Christmas duties.

Martin, who for the last seventeen years has been Santa Claus to thousands of children, has been well trained for his task. He succeeded his father, Louis Martin, who served fifteen years. Before the Martins had the postmastership, Louis Weiss and Samuel Weiss, brothers and relatives of the present postmaster, handled the mail here for twenty-five years.

Quesse of Janitors' Union Robbed; Chases 2 Bandits

William C. Quesse, business agent of the flat janitors' union, was robbed of $100 yesterday by two bandits in the office of an apartment building at 5006 Quincy street. Quesse followed the men as they fled to an automobile and fired several shots at them.

LAST MOMENT THRONGS CROWD STORES IN LOOP

Buying Described as Best Since 1929.

The last minute Christmas shopping rush is on, State street merchants said yesterday. The throng which crowded the loop stores yesterday was smaller in size than the peak crowds of last Saturday and Monday, but it was a crowd bent on buying, merchants agreed.

In a holiday season boasting a larger volume of business for the loop department stores than they have experienced since Christmas, 1929, yesterday's buying was described variously as "most gratifying," "exceedingly good," and as "continuing the remarkably good business of the last week."

"Sales persons report that the customers of today and yesterday do not come in and look around vaguely," one store official said. "They know what they want, they look at a thing and buy it. It is distinctly a buying crowd."

Buy Even Men's Suits.

Although purchases are still general, men's stores are doing a thriving business in robes, pajamas, slippers, ties, and even suits of clothes, indicating that gifts for the male members of families are intended to improve their appearance.

Toys are being purchased by last minute shoppers in quantities, as well as candy, perfumes, hose, lingerie, scarfs, handkerchiefs, and handbags, one store reported. Another store executive said that the fine details of the Christmas celebration now were being cared for, ornaments for Christmas trees, wrappings and stickers for gifts, decorations for the festive table, and nuts, candies, and plum puddings for the dinner. Among last minute favorites are imported perfumes and other "quality" items virtually neglected in recent years.

One of the department stores keeping open until 9 o'clock reported that for the last two nights business had increased after nightfall.

"In our outlying stores," that executive said, "we find that the CWA has created lots of business in work clothes. The men put to work by the CWA recently apparently had no warm clothing. A great deal of business in boots, coats, sweaters and so on was noticed as a result.

"We feel confident that this splendid Christmas business indicates a general pickup in business which will continue."

Jewelry stores shared in the brisk buying of the day, it was reported. Silverware and decorative jewelry were being purchased.

As an indicator of business it was pointed out that the Chicago Tunnel company, which carries packages from the loop to distributing points two miles away, there to be loaded on trucks, is being used more vigorously than at any time since 1929.

Christmas Mail Gains.

An all around increase in the volume of Christmas mail as compared to that of last year was announced yesterday by Postmaster Ernest J. Kruetgen. The volume of outgoing parcel post Wednesday included 68,367 sacks, an increase of 7,700 over that of the corresponding day last year.

Eleven million letters were handled in the postoffice Tuesday, all of them originating in Chicago, an increase of 500,000 over the corresponding day of 1932, and nearest the old record of 12,250,000 letters established Dec. 21, 1929. Sacks of outgoing parcels totaled 65,270 sacks Tuesday, as against 60,877 for that day last year.

3 ROB SEARS STORE AT SOUTH BEND; GET $3,000 AND ESCAPE

South Bend, Ind., Dec. 21.—[Special.]—Three bandits tonight robbed the Sears Roebuck & Company store here of about $3,000 and escaped. The store was crowded with Christmas shoppers when the bandits entered.

Two of the bandits carried sawed off shotguns in the raid on the second floor cashiers' office of the store which is located within six blocks of the center of the city. Cashiers were herded into a corner and one girl was forced into the large vault while the gunmen scooped up all cash in sight.

M. E. Barnhil, manager of the store, said the exact amount lost could not be determined until closing time.

Union League Club Holds 54th Anniversary Fete

Members of the Union League club yesterday celebrated the 54th anniversary of the founding of the organization with a luncheon and open house at the clubrooms. John McKinlay, president of the club and of Marshall Field & Co., traced the history of the club and its influence in civic affairs. The organization was founded in 1879 with 400 members under the name of the Chicago Club and Union League of America.

MANY SEND GIFTS TO GIRL ILL OF SLEEP SICKNESS

Even though she is not aware of it, Christmas has come for Patricia Maguire, 29 years old, of 523 Clarence avenue, Oak Park, who has been ill with sleeping sickness for 22 months. Patricia has slept continuously except for brief periods when she has regained a degree of consciousness.

The strangeness of the girl's malady has been recorded in newspaper stories which have aroused the sympathy and interest of their readers far and near. And these readers have sent her many Christmas presents—toilet sets, crates of oranges [one of the staples of the girl's liquid diet], and many small gifts—and thousands of greeting cards.

"I want to thank all the good friends who have remembered us at the Christmas season," Mrs. Sadie Miley, the girl's mother, said last evening. "Most of them have never seen Pat, but their good wishes are certainly welcome."

A recent restlessness on the part of the sleeping girl and the fact that her reflexes have become normal are considered signs that she is on the way to recovery, Dr. Eugene Trant, her physician, said yesterday. She is now being fed soft solid foods for the first time since she was stricken. She is to have a Christmas dinner of ground turkey and vegetables. Yesterday she was visited by her dentist and by the barber who trims her hair.

1 MAY DIE AND 4 GO FREE IN NAZI REICHSTAG TRIAL

Predict Dutch Youth Will Get Death Sentence.

BERLIN, Dec. 21.—(AP)—A sentence of death for one of the men accused of firing the German reichstag last winter and acquittal for the other four defendants will be contained in the verdict of Supreme court judges before whom the men have been tried, the Associated Press learned today from a usually reliable source.

Simultaneously Chancellor Adolf Hitler and Premier Hermann Wilhelm Goering of Prussia and reichminister of aviation, apprised of the nature of the verdict which will be handed down Saturday, faced a supreme test of their statesmanship, for civilian extremists threatened that three Bulgarian communists, for whom acquittal was said to be in store, would not reach the German border alive.

Torgler to Go Free.

The informant said Marinus van der Lubbe, a young Dutch brick mason, will be sentenced to death, that Ernst Torgler, a former communist whip in the reichstag, will be acquitted on the arson charge, and that the Bulgarians, Georgi Dimitroff, Blagoi Popoff, and Wassil Taneff, will be acquitted and expelled from Germany.

The chancellor and Goering, it was said in political circles, will give strict orders that the verdict, even though it may be disappointing to Nazi followers, must be respected at all costs.

Upon their acquittal, for lack of evidence, the trio will be handed back to the Prussian political police, who then will be responsible for their safety until they reach the German frontier, it was reported.

Goering's Threat Recalled.

Goering, the head of the police and the Prussian minister of the interior, is said to realize fully that were the Bulgarians to be "shot while attempting to flee," all the world would recall the remark Goering made at their trial on Nov. 4, when he told Dimitroff that "you have reason only to be afraid when once you leave the custody of this court."

Such an episode, as one of his friends put it, would "place an ineradicable stain upon his escutcheon."

Hitler was reported to have flared up at the mere suggestion of a threat and to have pointed out that, aside from everything else, his proposals for the pacification of Europe, as evidenced by his negotiations with England, France, Italy, and Poland, would suffer a severe setback.

Both statesmen, therefore, were reported tonight to be determined to see Dimitroff and his compatriots safely out of Germany.

Torgler will be held, the Associated Press was told, for a new trial with other communist leaders, including Ernst Thaelmann, on a charge of high treason.

The defendants in the trial were accused not only of incendiarism but of committing treason.

ICEBERGS PERIL TOWNS ON RHINE; BANKS OVERFLOW

OBERWESEL, Germany, Dec. 21.—(AP)—Ice on the Rhine river which a thaw set into motion today threatened disaster to all riverside towns and villages between St. Goar and Lorch, in southwestern Germany. Burgomasters in the towns ordered the entire populations to prepare for eventualities.

Veritable icebergs accumulated near Oberwesel, causing the waters to rise suddenly this morning 20 feet in two hours. Banks were overflowing and basements were flooded.

Two icebreakers tried in vain to operate. They became stuck. In the narrows of the Rhine the ice barrier was 15 feet high.

Lorch and St. Goar are important towns of considerable size. St. Goar is nearly 100 miles north of Lorch. A number of villages and towns lie between them.

When Missing Plunger Returned Home

PLANS TO LIVE FOR 100 YEARS; SHE DIES AT 99

While Ailing Twin Survives Her.

New York, Dec. 21.—[Special.]—Death today parted what are believed to be America's oldest twins.

Mrs. Jeanette Lauchheimer, who hoped to live until her 100th birthday on Jan. 16, died of pneumonia today at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Fannie Harris, in the Hotel Stanhope on 5th avenue.

The aged woman's twin sister, Mrs. Henriette Dannenbaum of Philadelphia, who has been an invalid for many years, does not know of Mrs. Lauchheimer's death.

Twin Won't Be Told.

Nor will she be told, Mrs. Harris said today. It is feared that the shock might be too much for her.

Always until last year, when inclement weather prevented it, the two aged sisters celebrated their birthday together.

The strongest of the two sisters was the one to die. Mrs. Lauchheimer's last illness was of only two days' duration. It was the first time in her long life Mrs. Lauchheimer had been ill, Mrs. Harris said.

Other Ill for Years.

Mrs. Dannenbaum, however, has been ill for many years, and has to have a nurse constantly in attendance.

The sisters emigrated to America 73 years ago from Germany, coming here on one of the earliest trans-Atlantic steamships, which required thirty days for the trip. Mrs. Lauchheimer was married the following year.

Four Greek Flyers Arrested in Plot to Kill Venizelos

ATHENS, Dec. 21.—(AP)—Four senior air force officers, who were understood by newspapers to have accused unnamed colleagues of complicity in an attempt against the life of former Premier Venizelos, were arrested today following upon the filing of a petition for their discharge. The air minister ordered an investigation.

Hint of Kidnaping

New York, Dec. 21.—[Special.]—It is highly probable that Jesse L. Livermore really was kidnaped and paid his captors, in the opinion of federal agents who were on the case today. Their investigation is continuing.

Mr. Livermore disappeared for almost exactly twenty-four hours, returning to his home at 1100 Park avenue late yesterday and saying that his mind had been a blank from a short time after he had entered his office downtown the day before until he came to himself again in the Pennsylvania hotel yesterday.

The federal men think that this may be the best explanation he dares to give and that he may have been abducted and released after the kidnapers' terms had been met with a warning that if he told what had actually happened he would be killed.

Nazis Lift Ban on Travel to All Lands Except Austria

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

BERLIN, Dec. 21.—Beginning Jan. 1, Germans may again visit any country except Austria. The domestic visa that they have needed to leave the country has been abolished, but the prohibitive 1,000 mark fee [currently about $370] for a trip to Austria has been retained. Despite the abolition of the visa, German tourists will not be able to go far, for the amount of money they may take with them is limited in most cases to 200 marks.

WIFE DIES OF SLEEP MEDICINE.

Mrs. Doris Slagle, 37 years old, died yesterday at her home, 4812 North Kirkpatrick avenue, of an overdose of a sleeping medicine. Sidney Slagle, her husband, reported he had found her in a coma when he returned home on Dec. 14.

ALL PROTESTANT YOUTH FORCED TO JOIN HITLER BODY

Rights of Church Groups Are Abolished.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Dec. 21.—Members of the German Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. groups under the age of 19 today were incorporated in the Hitler youth organization along with members of all Protestant youth bodies. Heretofore the German Y. M. C. A. has had close affiliations with the American association.

Abolition of the prerogatives of the Protestant youth organizations and their compulsory incorporation in the Hitler youth association increased the storm raging in Protestant Germany on the eve of Christmas. The action today was a defiant answer to a demand by the Evangelical youth group for reformation of the church cabinet.

The amalgamation was carried out by Baron Baldur von Schirach, who is a leader in the movement to establish a single church—neither Catholic nor Protestant—in Germany. He was ordered by Chancellor Hitler personally to enforce the unification of German youth.

4,000 Pastors Protest.

The Pastors' Emergency league, composed of about 4,000 ministers who are fighting Nazi domination of the Protestant church, immediately sent protests to the official news agencies, but the latter refused to publish them. Unless an agreement is reached with Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller by Saturday, the pastors are expected to carry on the fight in their churches Christmas eve and Christmas day.

The human touch has played a big part in Germany's present religious struggle. Bishop Mueller is a very sick man whose illness severely handicaps him and it is held to explain his vacillating attitude.

Originally it was planned for him to enforce the unification of youth organizations, but when it was found that sickness hampered his work, Nazi leaders designated the youthful von Schirach, a lyrical poet, as supreme master of the youth of Germany.

Tried Negotiation at First.

Von Schirach at first tried to negotiate with the different Protestant youth organizations which insisted on their old perogatives. This was termed opposition by Von Schirach and he thereupon dictated the conditions under which Protestant youth would be incorporated in the Hitler youth movement.

All sports training and field exercises as well as political education will now be directed exclusively by leaders of the Hitler youth. Only Hitler youth uniforms are to be worn by members—the old Protestant uniforms must be discarded.

Two afternoons weekly and two Sundays a month, however, the Protestant leaders "may direct the youths' educational and church activities. These days the youths may be freed from the duties of the Hitler organizations."

Ousts Protestant Leader.

Von Schirach's first action was to oust the leader of the Evangelical youth organizations, Erich Stange, and order his exclusion from the Hitler party. Von Schirach asserts that Stange tried to sabotage his unification plans.

The Catholic youths must also be brought into line, but this, the government declares, will be done slowly.

Henceforth prayers for President Paul von Hindenburg and Hitler must be included in all church services of Saxony.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Judges of the Superior court yesterday elected Judge Joseph Sabath as chief justice for the 1934 term, which ends on the second Monday of next December.

Judge Denis E. Sullivan was again chosen as acting chief justice, to act in case of Judge Sabath's absence. The members of the court's executive committee, which makes the assignment of judges to various calls, were chosen in June.

Judge Sabath, who is 62 years old and lives at the Chicago Beach hotel, has heard more divorce cases than any other judge in Cook county history. He has been on the Superior bench for 17 years, during 13 of which he has heard divorce calls. He also has presided in a number of notable criminal trials. He was a municipal judge for six years before his election to the Superior court.

RUSSIAN GODLESS SOCIETY FIGHTS CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

MOSCOW, Dec. 21.—(AP)—A drive of the All-Union Godless society to convert to the ways of disbelief those who retain their religious beliefs was in full swing today as Christmas approached.

The government itself set an example in godlessness and demonstrated to the proletariat its complete indifference to the religious significance of the day. The central executive committee, the chief administrative arm of the government, scheduled the opening of its winter convention for Dec. 25.

The atheistic organization, acting as a private agency with the full support of the communist party, relies on an intensive propaganda and educational campaign to attract people away from the churches, which still function and usually are crowded on Christmas and Easter.

"One hundred per cent attendance of workers at their jobs on Christmas day" is the Godless society's slogan, sounded by speakers in addresses to clubs, factory groups, schools, administrative units of all dwelling places, and even in the ranks of the Red army.

LEADER OF IRISH BLUE SHIRTS IS FREED FROM CELL

Court Liberates De Valera Foe on Writ.

BY HUGH CURRAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, Dec. 21.—Gen. Owen O'Duffy, co-leader of the United Ireland party and chieftain of the Blue Shirt movement, and his colleague, Capt. John Sullivan, who were arrested at Westport, County Mayo, Sunday, were released tonight from Arbour Hill prison. The men were liberated on an order issued by Justice Byrne of the Dublin high court after a hearing on an application for a writ of habeas corpus.

Gen. O'Duffy was met at the prison gates by a cheering crowd of his followers. He was in high spirits and shouted to interviewers:

"We are teaching the government to respect the law.

"The Blue Shirt movement is perfectly lawful and constitutional and will go on to victory," Gen. O'Duffy said later. "I don't anticipate there will be any more interference with Blue Shirts after the high court vindication. If there is, we are prepared to meet it. We will carry on until the objects which we established are achieved and until eventually as I hope and believe as the Irish people entrust us with the government of this country.

Calls Ruling Lesson to Rule.

"The high court decison has taught the government a lesson in law which I trust has not been lost upon them. So far as we are concerned we have always stood for upholding of the law."

The court's action is generally regarded as the worst blow President de Valera's government has received since it took office.

At today's hearing lawyers for the two imprisoned men argued that they had been illegally arrested. Attorneys for the government pleaded that under the public safety act the arrest was legal and correct. Lawyers for O'Duffy and Sullivan demanded their release. They charged that the pair were arrested for an offense which did not exist in law—namely, the wearing of a blue shirt.

Judge Issues Statement.

Justice Byrne, in announcing his decision, said:

"I can only come to the conclusion that O'Duffy was arrested because he was speaking to some persons while wearing a blue shirt. That is the only reasonable inference to be drawn from the facts. I do not accept the police superintendent's story of the arrest on suspicion as the true explanation of the case.

"So far as O'Sullivan is concerned there is no evidence why he was arrested and his detention is illegal. So far as O'Duffy is concerned, I am also satisfied his detention is unlawful. I also hold that provisions of the public safety act were not complied with as affecting the prisoners. From all circumstances I am of the opinion the detention of these two men is illegal and relief of habeas corpus should be granted. However, instead of issuing the order and requiring its return I shall peremptorily direct their release."

Banned Paper on Street.

Meanwhile United Ireland, the organ of the United Ireland party, the current issue of which was seized last night by the police, circulated a typewritten sheet late tonight. Referring to O'Duffy's release, it says:

"This decision of the courts of justice is a declaration that no government can continue to violate the law with impunity."

Details of the contents of the suppressed edition included an editorial commending O'Duffy and denouncing the alleged system of eavesdropping and spying among state employes.

"The government is prepared to use any means, however fair or tyrannical, to paralyze the political activities of opponents," the editorial concludes.

BOLIVIA CLAIMS TRUCE BROKEN; ENDS PEACE TALK

LA PAZ, Bolivia, Dec. 21.—(AP)—The Bolivian chancellory tonight instructed its delegation at the Pan-American conference in Montevideo to protest formally the capture of four forts in the Gran Chaco by Paraguayan troops as a violation of the eleven day armistice which went into effect at midnight Tuesday. The forts were captured only a few hours before the truce became effective.

Bolivians Indignant.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Dec. 21.—(AP)—Attempts to make permanent the Christmas armistice between Bolivia and Paraguay, begun two days ago, came to a halt today as Bolivian delegates to the Pan-American conference expressed their indignation at the Paraguayan occupation of four Bolivian forts just before the armistice went into effect.

The diplomats present regarded the situation as sufficiently serious to require placation of Bolivia before a basis of peace discussions could be defined. A plenary session of the conference, postponed from yesterday on account of the impasse between Paraguay and Bolivia, was again deferred.

BANDITS HOLD UP CWA WORKER AND FAMILY IN HOME

Four bandits, two armed with sawed-off shotguns, last night invaded the home of Louis Mowakosski, 1923 Greenleaf avenue, employé on a CWA project, and held him and four children prisoners in a bedroom while they forced Mrs. Mowakosski to go about the house with them and point out the hiding places of valuables. They got $12 and jewelry valued at $50. Sergt. Martin Gibbons of the Rogers Park police, who investigated the robbery, said he believed the bandits had mistaken Mowakosski's home for that of one of his more prosperous neighbors.

6 HOUR DAY FOR MILLION RAILWAY WORKERS URGED

Union Chiefs Meet Here; To Ask U. S. Law.

A six hour working day for the more than 1,000,000 railway employés in the United States was made a part of the legislative program adopted yesterday by the officials of 21 railroad unions, who met in the Palmer house in a closed session. Congress will be asked to pass laws in conformity with the program at its next session.

A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, who acted as chairman at the meeting, estimated that a six hour day would cost the railroads of the country $300,000,000 annually. The railroads themselves have estimated the probable cost at twice that amount, he admitted.

The same weekly and monthly basic pay schedules are to be retained for the railway men under the program.

Foresees Big Job Gain.

Mr. Whitney said it would be impossible to estimate how many men would be put back to work on the railroads if the six hour day and other features of the program were put into effect. A "substantial increase" in employment would be certain, he said.

The legislative program also urges a train limit law. Freight trains would be restricted in length to seventy cars and passenger trains would be permitted only fourteen cars. Full crews for freight, passenger, and yard service would be required.

"These reforms are designed to promote safety in the operation of the railroads," said Mr. Whitney. "Air brakes do not work with safety on long trains. Seventy cars make a freight train half a mile long, and the man in the caboose cannot read signals readily at a longer distance. There have been instances where freight trains were more than 200 cars long—nearly a mile and a half in length."

"Economy" to Cover Cost.

When asked if he thought the railroads could bear the increased operating expense caused by these laws, he pointed out that the railroads have previously met similar changes by effecting numerous economies in service.

He declared that the labor unions also will seek an amendment to the hours of service law which would prohibit trainmen from working more than twelve hours out of twenty; telegraph operators from working more than nine hours, and train dispatchers from working more than six hours out of any twenty-four.

The session will be concluded today. Amendments to the existing railroad labor laws will be asked, particularly with a view to enforcing the "status quo" feature, which has been neglected in the last few years, he said. This law provides that no changes may be made in wages or working hours, when a conflict between employer and employé arises, pending settlement of the dispute by arbitration.

'HONEYMOON' OF 4 MONTHS ENDS IN POLICE CELL

A four month illicit honeymoon which H. Ame Babcock, former Chicago shirt salesman, spent touring the country with Mrs. Lee Moore, former Springfield cigar clerk, ended early yesterday when they were arrested by New York detectives.

Babcock faces charges of stealing the automobile in which they made their trip and of passing bad checks in hotels in cities from Denver to Miami. Among the hotels he defrauded were the Drake and Blackstone in Chicago, in each of which he cashed a $100 check.

According to the Chicago office of the Burns Detective agency, Babcock, using the credentials he carried as a salesman, cashed other bad checks in hotels in Atlanta, Greensboro, N. C., Asheville, N. C.; Memphis, Tenn.; Pittsburgh, and New York. Babcock, the detectives said, has a wife and child in Denver.

LIBERAL PARTY WINS PARLIAMENT VOTE IN RUMANIA

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Dec. 21.—(AP)—Semi-official final returns from yesterday's parliamentary election today showed the National Liberal party swept to victory, as had been expected. The group contained 300 mandates or districts with 54 per cent of the total vote. National Peasants, who were victors in the 1932 election, polled only 9 per cent of the vote, winning 29 seats.

Although the radically anti-Semitic Fascist Iron Guard party was declared outlawed on Dec. 10 and barred from the elections, two other anti-Semitic parties won 9 mandates each. They were Prof. Cusa's National Christians and Gogas' National Agrarians.

The Jewish party apparently failed to win any districts. Eleven seats went to George Bratianus' dissident Liberals and 11 to Lupus' Peasant party.

Hoodlum on Trial for Manslaughter

Michael (Bubs) Quinlan in the court of Judge Donald McKinley yesterday when he went on trial for manslaughter in the auto death of James Berkovec. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

QUINLAN SLAYING CASE IS TERMED "WEAK" BY JUDGE

Decides Jury Can Vote on Guilt, However.

CRIMINAL COURT.

John Winters, robbery, sentenced to 1 to 20 years in the penitentiary; George Sanders, larceny, sentenced to 1 to 10 years, by Judge Philip Finnegan.

Thomas Potenza, robbery, sentenced to 1 year to life in the penitentiary by Judge Harry B. Miller.

Joseph Miske, larceny, sentenced to 10 years in the penitentiary under the habitual criminal acts; Vance Gray, rape, sentenced to 2 years, by Judge Michael Feinberg.

The manslaughter case against Michael [Bubs] Quinlan, south side hoodlum, was termed "very weak" by Judge Donald S. McKinlay in Criminal court yesterday as the state finished presenting its evidence. The charge grew out of an accident in January, 1933, in which Quinlan's car struck and killed James Berkovec and injured his wife, Julia, at 65th street and Ashland avenue.

"I consider the state's case very weak, but I will let it go to the jury," Judge McKinlay said in overruling the motion of Defense Attorney James M. Burke for a directed verdict of not guilty.

Finds Little Negligence.

"There is no evidence of intoxication, excess speed, or that the driver ran away from the scene of the accident," the judge continued. "There is usually one of these elements in such a case.

"The only thing in my mind is the testimony that the car struck a safety island, careened across the street, and struck a car with sufficient force to have moved it several feet. This might indicate that the defendant's car was traveling at a greater rate of speed than witnesses estimated."

Quinlan, who recently filed a pauper's petition in the County court to escape payment of a judgment of $20,000 growing out of a civil suit brought after the accident, appeared in court resplendent in a new suit.

Witnesses Tell Details.

State witnesses testified that Berkoveo and his wife were walking diagonally across Ashland aveune at 65th street when the accident occurred. The Quinlan car, witnesses said, skidded on the rain-soaked pavement, caromed off the safety island and struck the couple. The witnesses estimated that the car was traveling between 25 and 30 miles an hour.

Mrs. Berkovec, supported by a cane, limped to the stand and testified that she was walking under an umbrella with her husband when the accident occurred. She remembered nothing after the crash until she regained consciousness to find Quinlan placing a coat under her head, Mrs. Berkovec said. The defense will put witnesses on the stand this morning, and the case is expected to go to the jury this afternoon.

JUDGE DECIDES A COMPANY CAN BE LOVE THIEF

New York, Dec. 21.—[Special.]—A corporation may be sued for alienating the affections of a man's wife, according to a decision handed down today by Supreme Court Justice John L. Walsh. The case was that of Louis Gold against Jacob H. Bosky, Sadie Bosky, Irving Bosky, Betty Bernard, and the Pocket Brassiere Company, Inc.

Gold charges the defendants with alienating the affections of his wife, Dorothy, whom he married more than five years ago, and asks damages of $200,000. Justice Walsh today denied a motion to dismiss the actions.

27 PROPERTIES PUT UNDER TAX RECEIVERSHIPS

TAX COLLECTIONS.

Real estate tax collections yesterday were $247,186, making a total of $67,109,556 collected since enforcement of the Kerner-Skarda act began on April 28. The day's collections of real estate taxes and the uncollected taxes for the last four years follow:

	1928.	1929.
Dec. 21	$ 7,402	$ 34,692
Uncollected	15,904,735	42,406,787
	1930.	1931.
Dec. 21	98,782	106,219
Uncollected	67,256,981	66,748,755

The day's collections of 1931 personal property taxes totaled $4,918.

Twenty-seven income bearing properties were ordered into tax receiverships under the Kerner-Skarda act by County Judge Jarecki yesterday. The judge appointed County Treasurer McDonough receiver to collect a total of $68,000 for the years 1928, 1929, and 1930. Other property owners paid $42,000 in court during the day to avoid receivership action. The treasurer filed twenty petitions in the County court against properties owing $44,104 in taxes.

BLIND WOMAN IS HELD FOR HITTING ROOMER WITH AX

Mrs. Ben Hollar, 37 years old, a totally blind widow, was arrested last night and lodged in the Blue Island jail on a charge of assault with intent to kill. It was alleged she struck Thomas Weather, 51 years old, a roomer in her home at 163d street and Oak avenue, Oak Forest, on the head with an ax.

Also taken into custody was Leon Squibbs, 47 years old, chauffeur for the woman. Both asserted that Weather appeared at the house intoxicated and attacked Squibbs with a club. He defended himself, and Mrs. Hollar, seizing her ax, felt her way to the spot where the two men were struggling and swung the weapon on the roomer.

At the Oak Forest infirmary it was said Weather's condition was critical.

Held as Embezzler After 16 Years with Company

Herbert Dahlstrom, 30 years old, assistant manager of the office of the Container Corporation of America, 900 North Ogden avenue, was arrested yesterday on a charge of embezzlement. At the Racine avenue police station he was said to have admitted taking $9,000 from the corporation, all of which he lost playing the races. Dahlstrom had been an employé of the company for sixteen years, having started as an office boy when he was 14. His home is at 6308 Warwick avenue.

Mexico Makes President Dictator in Farm Affairs

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 21.—(AP)—The amendment to the Mexican constitution giving President Abelardo Rodriguez complete control in agrarian affairs became a law today, 48 hours after its proposal. The government received telegraphic notification that 19 of the 28 state legislatures had ratified it. A two-third majority was necessary.

FIRE BREAKS OUT IN WHITE HOUSE OFFICE WASTEPAPER ROOM

Washington, D. C., Dec. 21.—(AP)—A fire broke out in the waste paper room in the White House executive office today but was quickly extinguished without any damage. It is an inside room, without light, in the cellar of the executive offices—which were gutted by flames several years ago at Christmas time.

A fire detector system started today's alarm and a White House policeman put out the blaze without the necessity of calling fire apparatus.

Smoke fumes from the fire, however, spread throughout the executive office.

President Roosevelt was not present at the time of the slight blaze.

BULLITT LEAVES RUSSIA FOR U. S.; BACK IN FEBRUARY

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

MOSCOW, Dec. 21.—Ambassador William C. Bullitt left Moscow tonight for Paris and Washington and expects to return at the beginning of February.

The ambassador leaves no formal charge d'affaires or interim representative, although Keith Merrill of the economic section of the state department will remain here to continue the search for embassy premises which Mr. Bullitt said had not yet been concluded. It is probable the ambassador's residence will be the Vtorof mansion in Spasso Peskovski street already mentioned.

Mr. Bullitt stated definitely he had conducted no negotiations here and had confined himself to establishing contacts with soviet executives and the diplomatic corps and his search for premises.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

THE BAR MOVES AGAINST CRIME.

Five agencies, says a correspondent of the New York Times, are now at work in Massachusetts on related problems of ourbing crime, expediting court procedure, and promoting justice. Readers of the eastern press who have been led to believe that crime is peculiar to Chicago will be astonished to learn that conditions in Massachusetts are fast becoming intolerable, and yet have persisted so long as to seem almost incurable. This writer declares that the law's delays are inflicting enormous injustice upon a large part of the population of that commonwealth. A suit filed this year in Suffolk county, which is almost coterminous with Boston, will not come to trial before 1938, if then; and the Superior court, the main trial court, is falling behind at the rate of six months a year. Of interest to our advocates of procedural reform is his remark that many practices intended to protect the rights of citizens now tend actually to safeguard crime.

In the face of such a situation, though it has not been advertised by the American and foreign press as conditions in Chicago have been, it would seem Massachusetts may well follow the example of Chicago in its energetic efforts to reform.

Meanwhile the American Bar association announces that for the first time in the history of the country more than a hundred thousand lawyers are uniting to find out why the criminal law has broken down and to take steps, legislative and otherwise, to correct weaknesses in its enforcement. A questionnaire designed to expose every unhealthy condition in criminal law enforcement and with whom responsibility lies has been sent to 1,350 state and local bar associations, and leaders of the bar in every district will be asked to assume responsibility for the changes in law and administration which the inquiry indicates are desirable.

We need not enter into all the details of this ambitious prospect, but we may say that it is one of the most encouraging signs of the times that the organized profession of the law has wakened to the possibilities inherent in the profession for civic leadership against crime and the inefficient administration of justice. The profession has suffered discredit from a small minority of unscrupulous practitioners and hardly less by its failure to employ its collective influence boldly for the correction of flagrant abuses in the laws and their administration. It has failed to give advice upon legislation of critical importance and to defend principles of law and government when assailed by ill advised experiment. Lawyers are busy men no more blamable for lack of civic enterprise than any other citizen. But it is possible for the profession to make itself a powerful agency for the protection of the public welfare in respect both of the administration of justice and the well considered evolution of our law and public policy.

PUBLIC OPINION ON TRANSPORTATION.

The various questionnaires that are being addressed by Coördinator Eastman to everybody remotely interested in transportation are going to elicit a wide variety of replies, but when such replies are sorted and boiled down one commissioner at least will have a fairly comprehensive cross-section view of public opinion as to what is essentially wrong with our system of transportation and distribution as applied to the problems of industry, the farm and the individual. Here and there he may uncover a meritorious suggestion to aid him in framing legislation.

Public regulation of railways is now forty-five years old. Its life has been divided into three distinct periods—from the interstate commerce act of 1887 to the Elkins act of 1906, during which the interstate commerce commission could condemn rate adjustments but could not prescribe remedies; the golden age of reparation from the Elkins act to the transportation act of 1920, during which the commission could prescribe maximum rates and force their application, bringing forth an avalanche of ingenious devices for proving existing schedules unjust, unreasonable or discriminatory, and, finally, the era of "scientific" rate construction from the transportation act to the present, during which the commission has had control over both minimum and maximum rates.

The first period brought about the abolition of confidential rates, rebates, and free passenger transportation, which benefited the public and carriers alike, but proved that the act needed some teeth. The second period accomplished the destruction of railway initiative in the matter of encouraging traffic. Every rate concession or commission-made adjustment opened further fields for attack and the carriers became so weakened that they crashed with the war burden. The transportation act, wherein the needs of the carriers as well as the shippers were given cognizance, developed frozen rate structures, a tendency to divorce transportation from distribution, and competition from various new elements of transportation.

For the first time in the experiment into the hybrid idea of private ownership and government management experienced railway men in all fields of endeavor, producers, brokers, consumers, travel bureaus, ticket agents, and editors are given an opportunity to express their honest convictions at headquarters.

MORE AND BETTER TREES.

We publish in today's Voice of the People an interesting communication from the commissioner of public works of Oak Park, which will quiet the fears expressed in a TRIBUNE editorial and shared by many readers of THE TRIBUNE respecting the tree removal program in that attractive suburb. We agree with the policy described in Commissioner Meyers' letter and would recommend its general adoption by communities in this latitude. This, indeed, is a good time to weed out undesirable trees and to replace them at once with better kinds. But it is also a good time to plant trees in greater number. There is a great deal of public money being spent without regard to any other benefit than to make work. This is waste. There are plenty of things to be done which need doing and which will result in lasting benefits. Tree planting is certainly one of them.

Trees are a public benefit and our prairie country needs many more of them. They not only add to the beauty of the landscape but improve weather conditions. All our roads should be lined with them. In the days of bad roads they were not favored because it was thought they retarded the rapid drying of highways after rain. But this does not apply to modern hard roads. They are useful as windbreaks and their shade in the heat of summer is grateful to the traveler.

Well chosen varieties of trees will grow in city streets, and Chicago, which was once known as the Garden city and has in its coat of arms the legend Urbs in Horto [City in Garden], should plant more trees. For example, let us cite the beauty of Washington boulevard, which it is to be hoped will always be preserved. The tree lined boulevards of Chicago are one of its most delightful features and we should like to see trees in every residence street and wherever they can be planted. There are many industrial districts which could be greatly beautified in this way.

MR. LEWIS ATTENDS A BANQUET.

A few nights ago Mr. Sinclair Lewis, the novelist, attended his first public dinner in five years. The newspaper photographers annoyed him so much that he left the table and it took twenty minutes of pleading before he would return.

Mr. Lewis seems to have misunderstood the interest of the photographers. They were not concerned with him as a Nobel prize winner; there were a lot of other Nobel prize winners present. They were not interested in photographing a Nobel prize winner taking nourishment; there is no reason to suppose that distinguished men and women behave much better or worse at a table than the run of humanity.

What the photographers were after was the portrait of a man who had had the good sense for five years to stay away from banquets only to weaken. A man who doesn't like filet mignon, banquet style, doesn't like it and never will. A man who regards as inedible salads containing things that grow on trees ought to stay away from banquets. More especially a man who doesn't like toastmasters and orators and has declined to expose himself to them for five full years has indicated a mental habit and strength of character which ought to last for life, but in this instance didn't.

It is news when such a man bites a filet mignon, banquet style. As a former newspaper man Mr. Lewis should have understood why the photographers were concerned about him.

A SELF-LIQUIDATING PROJECT.

The very wise policy of the PWA in emphasizing the factor of self-liquidation in federal aid projects should encourage favorable consideration of the Chicago superhighway plan. This well studied system of main highways for the city and metropolitan district of Chicago will be self-liquidating in a high degree. It will not only provide prompt employment, directly in the form of construction work and indirectly in supply of material, but when completed will increase traffic, and increased traffic means more gasoline consumption and more automobile licenses, bringing money into the public treasury—local, state, and national—in gas taxes and license fees.

The superhighway system is urgently needed to improve communication to and from the second largest center of the nation. By making access both easier and safer the prosperity of the whole region will be stimulated and benefits will be widespread and lasting. From the viewpoint of assured returns, of self-liquidation, the application for aid for this public improvement is on a most favorable ground.

Editorial of the Day

RETURNING TO PIONEER METHODS.

[St. Louis Post-Dispatch.]

To the pioneers of western Kansas and other sections of the great plains the sod house was the equivalent of the log cabin built by early settlers in our wooded states. Scarcity of lumber led to the discovery that strips of the tough prairie sod, heavily matted as it was with roots of buffalo grass, made a building material that withstood the elements for a long time, without repair, producing a shelter warm in winter and cool in summer.

When it was decided recently to employ a detachment of conservation corps workers this winter in building a dam and lake near Dodge City, problems of housing equivalent to those facing the pioneers again arose. Lumber was scarce and carpenters were expensive, so the inspiration came to revive the "soddie." The technique of its construction seemed to be a lost art, however, until newspaper advertisements produced sixty veteran sod house builders from the plains country. Their work was handicapped by the dryness of the sod, resulting from the summer's drought, but that was overcome by adding water and chopped grass to the parched earth, and now ten soddies are near completion.

So the public works program results not only in monumental buildings but in humble sod houses, and conquest of the depression takes on another parallel to the pioneering methods by which the west was conquered.

CONSISTENT.

Horace Greeley always insisted the word "news" was plural. Once he wired one of his reporters in another city: "Are there any news?"

The reporter wired back: "Not a single new."—Stray Bits.

A-LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

BEING A CONTRACT BRIDGE shark and writing answers to game problems seems to be about the easiest job there is. Now, here is a card player who writes: "Opponent opened the bidding with four spades. My partner bid four no-trump. I held only a four card, nonbiddable heart suit. Should I have bid it?" How easy to answer a question like that. Of course she shouldn't have bid it. But if her partner wasn't her husband it would have been wrong to shoot. She should have kicked the table over and shouted, "This game isn't on the square! They're using loaded dice. Police! Police!" Maybe they don't use dice in contract bridge, but never mind; they keep changing the game so often they'll be using dice before long, so if my answer to the problem isn't all right now it will be some day.

SONNET FROM A SMALL TOWN.

I still can walk the streets of this small town
And glimpse above mean shacks the gracious trees,
And smile at muddy pools when I look down
To see the blue sky honor even these.
I still can look on beauty not my own,
On joy and riches not by me possessed,
And find within my heart no cause for moan,
Knowing, indeed, with one thing I am blest.
I still review young dreams that I have lost
And count the gain in glad philosophy;
While I can hold this love I value most
No woe can warp my spirit bitterly;
But if Life deal that one dream-dreaded blow
My heart will beauty blind forever go!

Think of waking up on Christmas morning and pulling ten bars of flea soap out of your stocking! I rather think when our Sealyham gets his flea soap Christmas morning what he's going to say about Santa Claus will be simply nobody's business.

THEY ARE ALL GONE!

Meaning the R. H. L. Linebook of 1933. We warned you they would be out by Friday; but those nimble Linebooks beat us to it; they were gone before noon yesterday. Which was Thursday. We thank you for helping us hang up a record. The entire edition was sold in twelve days. We're sorry for those who lost out—BUT—that's all there is, there isn't any more.

"NEW MILK PRICE War in Chicago," say the newspapers. But you don't hear of any Scotch whisky price war or Jamaica rum price war, do you, or Canadian rye price war, do you? And those things sell around six and seven dollars a quart while milk retails for 11 cents a quart. When it comes down to the necessities of life like Scotch and Jamaica rum and Canadian rye the consumers do not haggle over the price. They have to have it and they get it.

WHICH reminds me. Every time I see that word "Jamaica" I always remember the dear old vaudeville joke, "My wife's gone to one of them islands in the West Indies." "Jamaica?" "No, certainly not; she went of her own accord."

CHRISTMAS 1933.

(To Jesus the Nazarene.)

The world is here. We know not Galilee.
We know not of the cities where you walked,
Nor where you cast your nets nor in what sea.
We know not in what manner that you talked.
The world is here. Perhaps we've heard it told
That there was such as you, a man who wept
Upon Gethsemane. The tale is old
And hath been oft repeated. Judas kept
Troth falsely, we remember, and you bore
A cross too heavy through Jerusalem.
These are old things that happened long before
Our time. We can have no concern with them.
Again we nail you on the cross unheard.
The world is here. You speak an ancient word.

RUBBING THE HAIR OFF.

THE removal of superfluous hair is best done by the electric needle in those cases to which the method is suited. Unfortunately, there are a great many persons who wish to have such hair removed and who find this method unavailable or unsuited for some reason. There may be no expert on hand, or, if there is one, the expense may put the service out of reach. If many hairs are to be removed the method is too tedious, too painful, and too expensive to be practical.

Many make use of X-ray treatments because the service is less expensive as well as less tedious and uncomfortable. This method is a very unsatisfactory one. The hairs return promptly unless the skin is burned right up to the danger line.

Some make use of depilatory creams. These are composed of barium salts or allied compounds. They are unsatisfactory in that the hairs return promptly.

Modern Medicine quotes a German physician, Moncorps, as preferring a modified pumice stone method. The hairs are first bleached and made hard, stiff, and brittle by the use of a peroxide compound. The one he uses is composed of peroxide of hydrogen, 10 parts; benzol, 13 parts; dilute alcohol, 13 parts, and water, 13 parts. This mixture he applies to the hairs and keeps them moistened with it for one hour or more. Some skins are tough enough to stand this combination for twelve hours.

Two fine pumice stones are rubbed together until the rubbing surfaces are extra smooth. The hairy areas are rubbed with a smooth surface pumice stone until the hairs are worn off smooth with the skin. The rubbing should be in the direction the hairs point. This generally requires five minutes' rubbing. A rubbing is done every day or twice daily. It is not necessary to reapply the peroxide bleach unless a new crop of hair is allowed to come out.

Of course, this treatment can be overdone. If the skin is made sore the rubbing should be discontinued. Some skill as well as caution is required to accomplish the end desired without doing more harm than good. Unless one is ready to pay the price by learning how, and then by exercising caution or is able and willing to employ a qualified beautician, he or she had better let well enough alone.

PROMOTING GROWTH.

J. A. R. writes:

1. What is the name of the secretion of the pituitary gland which promotes growth?

2. Can this secretion be applied externally by purchasing a drug or medicine at a drug store? If so, what is the name of the drug?

REPLY.

1. That part of the pituitary that works to regulate growth is the anterior lobe. No one has succeeded in isolating the growth principle from the other principles in the glandular secretion. It is not manufactured or marketed.

2. What you seek is not to be had in drug stores. Physicians use thyroid to promote growth to a very limited extent. It has a small field.

AGE AND SLEEP.

B. O. writes: In the course of a discussion as to the amount of sleep required by individuals, A stated that for a person of 70 or more the usual eight hours of sleep is not required, and that such a person would require only five or six hours' sleep. B's opinion is that as the individual grows older and less active the person requires more sleep than a younger and more active person.

REPLY.

The average person 70 years of age needs eight hours' sleep daily. Many of them do not get it because something awakens them toward morning, after which they fail to relax and go back to sleep.

SWIMMING PAINS.

H. M. M. writes: I have recently started to take swimming lessons, and while learning to float [with head immersed in water] I have noticed that when I stop I have a sharp pain in the back of my head. Could you tell me what causes this?

REPLY.

Probably you have had some arthritis in the neck region of the spine or muscle rheumatism in your neck, and the pain is the direct result of the posture.

ECZEMA.

Helen writes:

1. What is the cause of eczema of the navel?

2. Can it be cured and how?

REPLY.

1. Lack of cleanliness.

2. It can be cured. If it is raw cleanse with cold cream and apply a good dusting powder. When it has gotten better wash often with soap and water and use a good dusting powder.

NOTE OBLIGATION.

Monmouth, Ill., Dec. 18.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—In 1922 my father went on a note with my brother and myself for $1,200 to promote a business venture for my brother and me. My brother had no property while I held 60 acres of land. Our business failed and we were unable to pay the note. I deeded the 60 acres to father and secured judgment on my brother for one-half of the note. Father was unable to pay taxes and interest on this land and the bank from which we borrowed the $1,200 [1] put the land up for sale and sold it for the amount of the note. The banker bid it in. 2. Father holds a lifetime dower on 160 acres. At his death six children will inherit it. Does the banker have a right to sell my brother's and my interest in the dower to settle the costs of the $1,200 note which amounts to $485? P. H. H.

1. We assume that you mean they took judgment on the note and proceeded with execution sale.

2. We assume that you mean that your father holds a present life interest with remainder to the children rather than merely dower which will become an interest upon the death of his wife. In general such a vested remainder interest could be subjected to the payment of your creditors. We could advise to better advantage if you had stated the facts out of which the interest which you call a dower interest arose.

UNSIGHTLY BUILDING.

Chicago, Dec. 18.—[Friend of the People.]—The building next to mine is an old frame three story, which is unoccupied and has been for some time. I understand it has been condemned and is unfit for tenants. Children have started a number of fires in the building. The houses on both sides are old wooden frame buildings and if a fire were to start considerable damage to other people's property and perhaps loss of life would result. This old building should be torn down before such things occur.

C. W. E.

Our inspector reports this is a three story frame building, vacant, and boarded up for a number of years. Some of the shutters have been removed by vandals, but the owner has complied with our notice to replace shutters and the building is now securely closed to vandals. The building, while unsightly, is not in a dangerous condition.

BANKRUPTCY.

Chicago, Dec. 17.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. What are the necessary steps one must take to be declared bankrupt? 2. Approximately how much does it cost to go through bankruptcy proceedings? A. J. S.

1. We suggest that you examine the files of such proceedings in the office of the United States court clerk in the Federal building.

2. The attorney's fees would be the largest item. We suggest that you secure an estimate from the attorney whom you would employ.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—The hopes of feminists that France some day in the not too far distant future will give the vote to its women received a rude setback recently through the Spanish elections, when Spanish conservatism, which has been submerged by radicalism ever since the revolution which overthrew the monarchy, reasserted itself with the aid of millions of women voters.

French suffragists have always been repulsed by the French legislators with the argument that if French women were given the vote they would vote right wing and that at their hands the republic would not last long.

These opponents of women's suffrage are, since the Spanish election, smugly saying "I told you so," and a thick pall of pessimism envelops the camp of the French suffrage movement.

The French feminists suffered their latest repulse in the senate last year when that august body after a scorching debate lasting five days voted, 253 to 40, to shelve the bill indefinitely. Senator Hery, who handled the bill on the floor for the special committee that had been set up to consider it, was particularly bitter against it.

He said the proposal to place women on the same political footing as men was "monstrous in these times when the country is faced with such great difficulties."

"If you want to upset the republic," he cried, "and the whole civilization, all you need to do is to give the vote to women. Women never produced a genius in any sphere of activity. Why should they do so in politics?"

He went on to say that participation of women in international affairs would be just as disastrous as in domestic politics.

His statement that "votes for women will mean the overthrow of the republic" met with warm applause.

A couple of days before the senate voted to shelve the bill the feminists had been heartened by a resolution adopted unanimously by the Paris municipal council calling on the senate to give suffrage to all women over 25, and the right to sit in parliament.

The suffrage movement had hoped to win at least some concessions. One compromise suggested was that the vote be given to all women over 30 who are heads of families.

TREES IN OAK PARK.

Oak Park, Ill., Dec. 18.—The recent editorial in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE entitled "Caveat Spender" gives the wrong impression as far as the tree removal project in Oak Park is concerned.

The removal of undesirable trees is an enterprise that is a "happy" thing for the community at the present time and will look more so in the future. Th removal of these trees is a progressive step looking towards the proper tree planting of all the streets.

It is unfortunate that the poplar trees now being removed were ever planted. Our present ordinances prohibit the planting of this variety of tree. Most of them were set out in connection with large property developments and the principal reason for planting them was that they were cheap and quick growing, but for several years these trees have been dying out by the hundreds and have been a source of great annoyance and expense to village officials and citizens. They prevent the growing of grass, are a dirty tree, and interfere with public and private drainage systems. There are hundreds of requests on file from citizens for the removal of these trees.

For several years practically all of the village funds available for forestry work have been spent in removing dead poplar trees instead of giving necessary attention to the more permanent and suitable street trees. Ultimately all of the poplar trees will have to be removed, and the opportunity to remove them now without direct expense to the property owners is an advantage and a saving to all concerned.

It does take time to grow trees, but as the poplars will all have to be removed the sooner they are replaced with a more permanent type of tree the sooner the community will again have the benefit of proper tree planting.

Avenues bordered with stately, high arched enduring elms, properly spaced, present an appearance of dignity and beauty, but streets lined with scraggly, misshapen, dying poplars crowded together are ugly and shabby.

Trees are one of the chief attractions of Oak Park. The present project is one which will preserve and extend this asset to all parts of the community.

DUDLEY C. MEYERS,
Commissioner of Public Works, Village of Oak Park.

FROM A STUDENT OF JOURNALISM.

Notre Dame, Ind., Dec. 15.—I am told that many critical letters come to a newspaper office, but very few complimentary letters come in. I suppose human nature is responsible for this. The letter I am now writing is intended to be a complimentary letter, and I feel that it is well deserved.

As a student of journalism I am much interested in the current topic of government control and censorship of newspapers and have made some study of this dark cloud that is now hanging over the head of the profession. I only want to say that among the newspapers that are fighting against the possible suppression of press right THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE is outstanding in its sound and accurate method of dealing with this problem. There is no longer any excuse for the reading public to be ignorant of the fact that the press, especially the newspaper, is one of the most powerful influences working toward good citizenship and well regulated government.

UNION DUES.

Chicago, Dec. 19.—In behalf of myself and the rest of the ex-service men who have received the same treatment, I wish to state I have been on the relief lists for two years. Today I received notice to go to work, and on reporting to the place of assignment I was told that I was too far behind on my carpenters' union dues.

On calling the secretary of my local at Des Plaines I was told that even if I could borrow the $100 necessary to rejoin I must wait two weeks until the district council voted my reinstatement.

I had understood that this work was to be done by men on the relief lists wherever possible.

Twice I had work from the relief, but none of the money was to be used for union dues. If I had had the $100 which the union demands I wouldn't have received relief. Consequently it seems to me that union men whose dues have been paid should not be given preference.

DOMESTIC FATS IN MARGARINE.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 15.—In THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE of Dec. 9 there is an article entitled "Curb on Foreign Fats Demanded by Farm Women."

The members of the Institute of Margarine Manufacturers and a few other margarine manufacturers want to see the margarine business put on a domestic fats and oils basis, and are, as a matter of policy, supporting legislation designed to accomplish this very thing. This group of margarine manufacturers has filed with the agricultural adjustment administration an oleomargarine marketing agreement which, if approved, will accomplish this purpose.

Our group of manufacturers supporting this policy, in point of volume of margarine production, represents a little more than 50 per cent of the entire industry. The other margarine manufacturers have vigorously opposed our policy and this section of our marketing agreement.

J. S. ABBOTT,
Secretary, Institute of Margarine Manufacturers.

CRIME IN FICTION.

Chicago, Dec. 16.—I don't know the crime rate of the Moros or the Hottentots or the Zulus, but I'll lay a bet it's away below ours. I've read many an article about this, and I think I have found out the reason.

In the first place the Zulu hasn't got any welfare association to look after the criminal, no minister to talk up for him at the parole board, no criminal law attorney to get him out on habeas corpus, and no kindhearted judge to apply the golden rule, unless it is at least three inches thick.

But the real cause of our crime problem is the novel. In the novel every criminal is caught and punished, and a whole lot of innocent people besides. Consequently the public, which is always for the under dog, sticks up for the man in jail. That's where the dear public gets its sympathy for the yegg.

The thing to do is to let every criminal escape and every man in court go free, in the novel. Of course that would do away with the detective story, and the beautiful classic in which the innocent man is convicted and hanged, and the wonderful movie where the convict conspires to protect the weak, and help the poor, and strive to prevent in ustice. But it's either that or have the crime wave with us.

PASSENGERS QUIT LINER ON ROCKS IN ZERO STORM

Tell of Taking to Boats After Crash.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Dec. 21.—(AP)—The Canadian National liner Prince George crashed on a rock in a blinding snowstorm last night on the British Columbia coast and was reflocated today after passengers and crew were rowed ashore.

It was blowing a gale and the temperature was near zero as Capt. N. McLean's vessel hit Vadso rock, near Anyox, B. C., ripping her bottom. An S O S was flashed and three ships raced to the rescue, but the Prince George was abandoned early today by the 17 passengers and crew of about sixty.

"Capt. McLean gave the order for us to take to the boats, women and children first," said Anton Pervich, one of the passengers. "We were given blankets to protect us from the cold. It was snowing very hard.

Treat Incident as Joke.

"Every one took places in a cool and orderly fashion. In fact, most of the passengers treated the incident as more or less of a joke. There were four or five women and three children."

They reached Anyox soon, and the only discomfort was from the cold, he said. Shortly afterward, under direction of Thomas Louden, superintendent of the Canadian National, who was a passenger, a tugboat was sent to pull the Prince George off the rocks.

Then she made port at Anyox.

It was a dramatic scene but an orderly one when the ship struck, said Pervich.

Ship Lurches to a Stop.

"Most of the passengers, of whom there were 17, were getting their belongings together in readiness for landing at Anyox when about 10:30 o'clock last night there was a long grinding sound and the ship seemed to shudder all over as it lurched to a stop," he continued.

"I ran from the smoking room to the deck and found the other passengers already there, but there was no sign of panic. After we waited about an hour Capt. McLean told the passengers it would be best for them to abandon ship, and he indicated we would be safe in making the trip to shore in the lifeboats."

Crash in Fog; Seven Perish.

HULL, England, Dec. 21.—(AP)—Seven lives were lost today when the trawler Kurd collided with and sank the Swedish steamer Castor off Flamborough Head in a dense fog. The trawler rescued the captain and five members of the crew of the Castor and brought them here. The Swedish ship went to the bottom within two minutes after the collision. A stewardess was among those lost.

Ship Wrecked in West Indies.

CASTRIES, St. Lucia, West Indies, Dec. 21.—(AP)—Driven aground by a storm, the schooner Marguerita was wrecked today on the southwest coast of St. Lucia. Her crew and two passengers reached shore in dories.

Match Ship Fire Under Control.

GOTHENBURG, Sweden, Dec. 21.—(AP)—Capt. William of the Swedish-American liner Rydboholm reported by wireless today that a fire which broke out yesterday at sea in ten tons of matches in the forehold of the ship apparently was under control.

He said the ship was proceeding at normal speed toward Boston.

The captain said the smoke had abated after the hold was filled with steam, but that it was impossible today definitely to determine whether the fire had been distinguished.

BUREAU MERGER FOR ECONOMY IS URGED BY MAYOR

Mayor Kelly yesterday submitted to the city council an ordinance providing for the consolidation of the bureau of streets and the department of gas and electricity in a new department of streets and electricity. The ordinance would abolish the positions of superintendent of streets and commissioner of gas and electricity, as well as subordinate positions, and create a new position of commissioner of streets and electricity, with such subordinate offices as are necessary for the functioning of the new department.

The bureau of streets and the department of gas and electricity had total appropriations of $15,361,417 this year. Mayor Kelly suggested the consolidation as a matter of economy. Activities of both divisions of the government are concerned with streets, the department of gas and electricity principally with street lighting, and the bureau of streets with refuse collection and street cleaning and the expenditure of vehicle tax funds for street repairs. The ordinance was referred to the finance committee.

The council passed an ordinance placing the position of deputy commissioner of public works under civil service. John P. Wilson, former alderman, now holds the post as an appointee of Mayor Kelly.

NEWFOUNDLAND LOSES SELF-RULE; KING SIGNS BILL

LONDON, Dec. 21.—(AP)—A bill empowering the British government to suspend self-government in the "ancient colony" of Newfoundland and take charge until its finances are restored received final approval today.

Administration of the island will be under a commission of six members, appointed by the British government. It was estimated that a period of three years will be necessary before the island is reestablished. Fought vigorously in both houses of parliament, especially by labor, the bill was not passed until the government met the opposition's wishes by making it clear that Newfoundland's government is merely suspended, not revoked.

It was signed by King George today. The measure followed the report of the royal commission on Newfoundland, which said that Newfoundland is financially and politically exhausted. The report revealed there has been an annual average deficit of $2,000,000 during the 12 years ended in 1932.

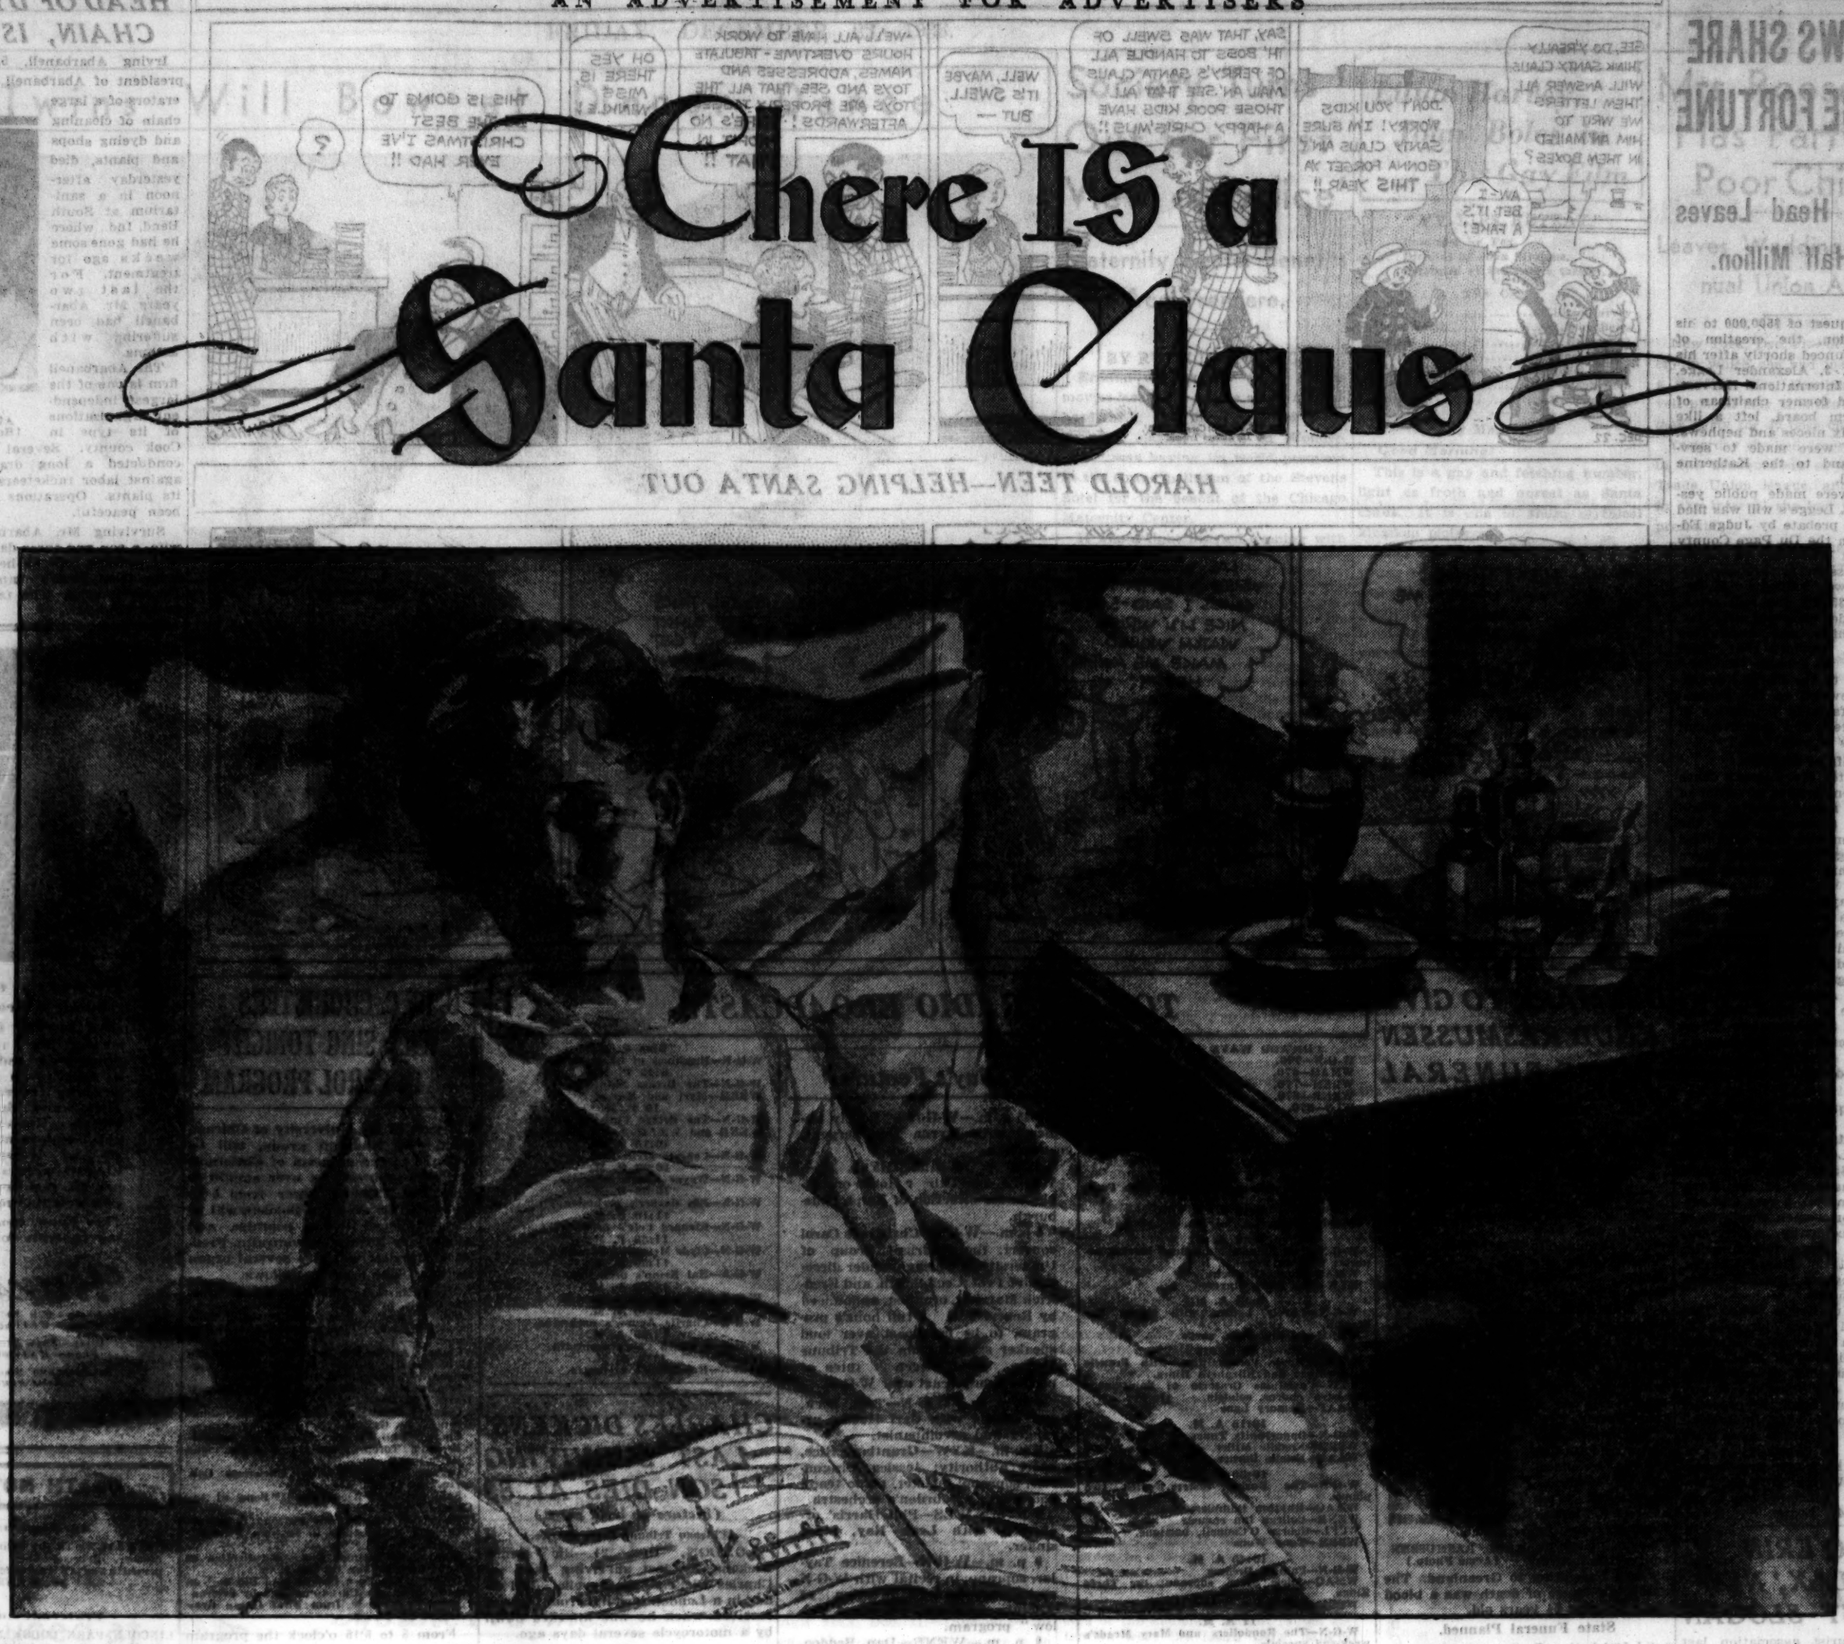
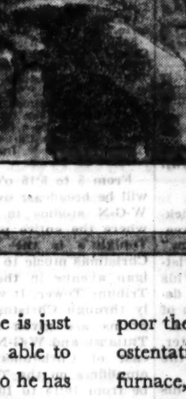
There Is a Santa Claus



PETER is five and very frail. He is just getting over pneumonia, and has not been able to visit Santa Claus in the stores this season. So he has worn a toy catalogue to tatters. Out of all the lovely things in this world, Peter wants three for Christmas, wants them very, very much . . . two turtles in their own glass house, a rocking horse with a real hair tail, and a cowboy suit with a gun.

Peter's father's salary is not what it once was. The doctor has made a lot of calls this last month. It will take oodles of orange juice and cream and haliver oil to get Peter on his feet again. There are two other children in the family, and Mother's new winter coat is long overdue. But if the world lasts until December twenty-fifth, you may bet your bottom inflated dollar that S. Claus will positively deliver to Peter's house . . . (2) turtles with turtle tank, (1) rocking horse with horschair tail, and (1) cowboy suit, complete with gun.

Mabel works in a not very nice factory. For a year or more her pay envelope held a paltry seven dollars. Then the N. R. A. happened and boosted Mabel to twelve dollars a week. For six months Mabel has been saving some money. For investment? Well, in a way. The boy friend has a bid to a swell party Christmas week. And Mabel has shot the works on an evening gown, wrap, necklace, permanent and manicure.



The Pierces are one of those well to do families who have felt that it's smart to act poor these last three years. They have economized, ostentatiously. Recently Angelo, who tends their furnace, has been coming around in a car that looks better than the Pierces' 1928 model. Mrs. Pierce now thinks enough is enough. The Pierces are looking at new cars.

Retail liquor stores in New York City report three big selling items: rye, Scotch, and champagne!

THE economists and sociologists lately have been making quite a fuss about the American public becoming accustomed to lower standards of living. People, they say, are no longer ashamed to go on wearing old clothes, using old cars or toothbrushes. And if the makers of clothes and cars and toothbrushes don't do something about it soon, it will be just too bad. The outlook for business will be very low.

However, we think that business has a Santa Claus, too. His name is Jones.

The Joneses were the family we were all so busy keeping up with a few years ago. They made wives envious and husbands sore at their extravagance. We haven't heard much about them lately, but they're still here—and beginning to step out again. A lot of people are ready to step with them again.

For Jones, substitute human nature or instincts. Children are still being born, growing up and wanting things—and parents are still trying to give them what they want. Women still like to be beautiful and smart and comfortable, and husbands still like to keep them happy. Families are still interested in things which make life more pleasurable, and trying to get them. People have been scared to spend and buy these past four years, but they don't stay scared forever. Wants—and instincts—reassert themselves.

No money? The report is greatly exaggerated. Many haven't the money they once had. Others have more cash on hand than they ever had. Afraid to spend or speculate, they have saved. Human nature, with cash on hand, is ripe for spending. Check up on savings deposits and automobile sales in 1933!

We do not, however, predict any spending orgy. Customers are coy, conservative and deliberate. Selling is not easy—but is possible. Business men who wait for general conditions to improve their business may have some time to wait; by the time business improves generally the cream is off all markets. But with some reason, we do maintain that business men who go after business where it is to be had—will enjoy better business!

WHAT is our reason? Well, the newspaper signing this advertisement. Published in New York City, it is bought and read by more people than any other newspaper in America. Its circulation of more than 1,400,000 copies takes in three-fifths of the families in New York City, and about a quarter-million suburban families. If there is any index of public attitude in this part of the country—this paper is it!

Now The News has more circulation than it had in 1929—and has had more every year since 1929. It has gained every month in 1933, except May. It happens to be a paper most people like, and more of them buy it every year, depression or not.

More important, this newspaper has carried more advertising every year since 1929 than it had in 1929. It gained advertising in 1930 and 1931, dropped back some in 1932, and has been climbing every month since last April. And News advertising space costs more than any other newspaper space in this country! We can't conceive of advertisers using more space in this newspaper unless they were getting more business from our readers. Can you?

SO IF you'd like to have a visit from Santa Claus in 1934, come aboard this News bandwagon. It will open the best market in the world for you. It can do the whole advertising job alone. Its small pages make your advertising do more work. And per reader or result, it costs less than any other medium in this market. As evidence of what The News is doing for other advertisers, it is first in display linage, in retail linage, in department store advertising expenditure among all New York papers in 1933! RSVP?

SIX NIECES AND NEPHEWS SHARE LEGGE FORTUNE

Harvester Head Leaves Them Half Million.

Beside his bequest of $500,000 to his Farm Foundation, the creation of which was announced shortly after his death last Dec. 3, Alexander Legge, president of the International Harvester company and former chairman of the federal farm board, left a like amount to his six nieces and nephews. Minor bequests were made to servants, friends, and to the Katherine Legge Memorial.

These facts were made public yesterday when Mr. Legge's will was filed and admitted to probate by Judge Edgar F. Thoma in the Du Page County Probate court at Wheaton. In the petition for admission to probate Mr. Legge's estate was valued at $1,035,000, of which $35,000 was real estate and the remainder personal property.

The will, which was drawn on March 18, 1932, provided that "half the estate not to exceed $500,000" should be given to the Farm Foundation, "to be devoted to the general welfare of the farming population of the United States, and improvement of the conditions of rural life."

Total Gift of $900,000.

Three days after Mr. Legge's death Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois and for many years a friend of Mr. Legge, announced that the Farm Foundation had been organized and that Mr. Legge had already given $400,000 to it, thus bringing his total gift to $900,000.

The other major provision of the will set aside the residual estate, after fulfillment of the minor bequests, for division in equal shares among Mrs. Ina Sharman and Mrs. Helen L. Creelman of San Diego, Cal.; Miss Mildred Legge of Los Angeles, James and Alexander Legge of Rogers, Neb., and Roy A. Legge of San Francisco. These nieces and nephews were Mr. Legge's only relatives. Attorneys said that they would divide approximately $500,000.

Butler Bequeathed $5,000.

To Mrs. Olive M. Coffin of Covina, Cal., sister of Mr. Legge's late wife, Mrs. Katherine Legge, a gift of $20,000 was made, and $5,000 was bequeathed to Fred Cox, manager of the Katherine Legge Memorial, a rest and recreation center for women employés of the Harvester company, which was created by Mr. Legge following his wife's death in 1923. Harry Kimura, butler in Mr. Legge's Hinsdale home, also was given $5,000.

In his will Mr. Legge asked that Mrs. Coffin and Mrs. Margaret E. Jones, wife of a Harvester company official and a neighbor of Mr. Legge, divide the furnishings of his home among relatives and friends. If any of these effects are sold, the proceeds are to be given to his wife's memorial. The memorial is on an 88 acre tract two miles south of Hinsdale.

Executors of the estate are George A. Ranney and William M. Gale, Harvester company officials and long time friends of Mr. Legge.

Irving Abarbanell, 52 years old, president of Abarbanell Brothers, operators of a large chain of cleaning and dyeing shops and plants, died yesterday afternoon in a sanitarium at South Bend, Ind., where he had gone some weeks ago for treatment. For the last two years Mr. Abarbanell had been suffering with asthma.

DENMARK TO GIVE KNUD RASMUSSEN STATE FUNERAL

Arctic Explorer Dies of Food Poisoning.

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Dec. 21.—(AP)—Dr. Knud Rasmussen, who was known and honored throughout the world for his daring explorations, died today not long after he expressed a belief that he had gained a new lease on life, to which he clung tenaciously as a true Nordic.

The Danish explorer and authority on Greenland and the Eskimos, succumbed after a long illness brought on by food poisoning contracted during his last expedition to Greenland. The immediate cause of death was a blood clot. He was 54 years old.

State Funeral Planned.

"I feel better; I am getting courage and life back again," were among his last words.

He will have a state funeral.

All Denmark mourned his passing and tribute poured in. King Christian personally sent his condolences to the widow.

Dr. Rasmussen was seriously ill when he was brought home Nov. 3. It was announced then that only a blood transfusion aboard ship had saved his life.

He was born at Jakobshavn, Greenland, June 7, 1879. His maternal ancestors were Eskimos. His first expedition to Greenland was in 1902, and between 1905 and 1924 he visited and studied all the known Eskimo tribes.

Traced Origin of Eskimo.

From his investigations he concluded that Eskimos originally were Indians who had wandered east and west from the coast. Last year he headed an expedition which surveyed 12,500 miles of Greenland's southeast coast and found that Greenland was moving westward 20 yards a year.

In 1926 he was awarded one of the few life memberships in the American Geographical society.

Seven years ago he consulted with the Canadian government about the preservation of Eskimos. He based his recommendations on his findings during an expedition across the rim of the North American continent to Siberia. On one of his many trips he was missing 15 months, but turned up at last in Alaska.

On his efforts was based largely the awarding of Greenland to Denmark by the world court over Norway's claim.

'COME TO ERIN AND RELAX,' NEW TOURIST SLOGAN

The Irish Tourist association last night celebrated the extension of its activities to the United States with a dinner at the Palmer house. "Come to Ireland and relax," was suggested as a slogan for the association by D. J. McGrath, Irish Free State consul in Chicago.

Mayor Kelly welcomed the association and Judge John P. McGoorty was toastmaster. Other speakers included Leo K. Connolly, general manager of the association in America, D. F. Kelly, president of the Fair store, Judge James J. Kelly, Michael O'Kiersy, middle western manager of the association, Roger Faherty, Thomas O'Shaughnessy and Mrs. W. McWhorter.

The popularity of Irish horses was discussed by Mr. Connolly, who said they are being exported to 38 countries and used in eight continental armies. In 1932, he said, Irish bred horses won half a million pounds in stakes in 23 countries.

SIX ARE INJURED IN SCHOOL BUS CRASH IN FLORIDA

Inverness, Fla., Dec. 21.—(AP)—At least six of 35 school children were injured, none seriously, here late today in Florida's third school bus accident within eight days.

The bus overturned when an automobile driven by J. L. Johnson struck its side at a street intersection. Johnson was jailed pending an investigation.

Ten elementary school children were killed and more than a score injured near Crescent City last Thursday when a freight train struck a school bus. Fifteen more were hurt near Crestview the next day when the steering wheel of a school bus locked and it overturned.

70 BOY SCOUTS PROMOTED TO RANK OF EAGLE

Seventy Boy Scouts were presented certificates entitling them to the rank of eagle scout at the fourth quarterly court of honor, held last night by the Chicago Council of Boy Scouts of America in the council chamber of the city hall. The eagle award, considered the highest honor a scout may attain, is presented to those who have successfully passed 21 merit badge tests. At present there are 392 eagle scouts from 740 troops in the city.

Samuel G. Gorsline, scout commissioner for the city, presided as chairman of the court of honor committee. The speaker of the evening was Perry A. Lint, executive of the Chicago council, who also presented the awards.

Dorothy West of Boston to Visit Palmers

Cousin of Young Couple to Arrive After Holidays.

BY JUDITH CASS.

POST-HOLIDAY depression as far as the social calendar is concerned was saved yesterday with the interesting news that Miss Dorothy West, the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George S. West of Boston and the cousin of Mrs. Potter Palmer III., is coming to Chicago shortly after the beginning of the new year to visit Mr. and Mrs. Palmer.

Miss West's arrival will be the signal for a fashionable round of entertaining highlighted by a small dinner dance to be given by the senior Mr. and Mrs. Potter Palmer the evening of Saturday, Jan. 6, at their home at 1301 Astor street.

It will be remembered that Miss West attended the junior Mrs. Palmer [the former Rose Saltonstall Movius] as maid of honor when she was wed to Mr. Palmer Feb. 6, 1932. As the daughter of Mrs. Alice L. West Movius and Hallam L. Movius of Boston, Mrs. Palmer is related to Miss West through her mother's family. Both the Movius and the West families are descended from Sir Richard Saltonstall, one of the founders of the Massachusetts Bay company. The West home is on Saltonstall avenue in Chestnut Hill, an exclusive residential section of Boston.

Friends of Opera Aid New Group.

All the Friends of Grand Opera needed to revive them was another Chicago Grand Opera company, apparently, for at a meeting of the executive committee yesterday at the residence of the chairman, Mrs. Arthur Meeker, it was decided to assist the new opera company in every way possible.

And the assistance is being started in a very material way by subscribing to five boxes in the name of the organization. Just what disposition is to be made of the boxes is yet to be decided, however. It was decided, though, to give the FOGO another of the really fine musicals that used to be given several times each season. The artiste is to be that great favorite, Mme. Edith Mason, who has come from her home in Milan to sing with the new company, but the date was not set yesterday and cannot be until Mme. Mason's schedule of appearances is completed.

Daniel Leonard Ill, Wedding Postponed.

Because Daniel Leonard was taken ill with pneumonia last Friday, and because he is still seriously ill in his father's [John R. Leonard's] home in Winnetka, the date for his wedding to Miss Sarah May Morey, daughter of the James Moreys, has had to be postponed.

The invitations to the wedding and to the Leonards' annual New Year's day at home, which was to have served as a wedding reception also, will be recalled and the reception will be postponed, as well as the wedding.

Chicago's charming soprano, Mrs. Charles H. Swift, who is known in the concert world as Mme. Claire Dux, is to entertain at luncheon at her residence on Lake Shore drive next Thursday for the lovely French soprano, Mme. Ninon Vallin, who is to sing that morning at the Kinsolving morning musical at the Blackstone.

This is Mme. Vallin's first appearance in Chicago, but many Chicagoans have heard her sing before, for she has sung in opera in Paris, Milan, Rome, Madrid, Vienna, Buenos Aires, Rio de Janeiro, Stockholm, and many other foreign cities.

News of Holiday Travel and Visits.

Three well known Chicagoans, Mrs. Martin A. Ryerson and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Charles L. Hutchinson, and their nephew, John W. Hutchinson, will eat their Christmas turkey in Arizona, for they left yesterday to spend the rest of the winter in Chandler, that attractive desert resort which is so popular, especially with members of the older generation, many of whom have been going there for years and years. Arizona olive fed turkeys are something to rave about, too!

Mrs. Ambroze Cramer is leaving today to spend Christmas and New Year's with an old friend, Mrs. Egbert Smit, in Colorado Springs. Her daughter, Mrs. Donald M. Ryerson, has gone to Asheville, N. C., with her son, Anthony, and daughter, Joan, to spend the holidays with her sister, Mrs. James G. K. McClure. After the holidays Mrs. Ryerson and Joan will go to Jamaica to be away until Easter, and Mrs. Cramer is planning to join them there.

The Corwith Cramers, Mrs. Cramer's son and daughter-in-law, are cruising about in Florida waters on their new little boat, Seafoam II.

The junior William B. McIlvaines of Winnetka have gone east to spend Christmas with her mother, Mrs. L. Carteret Fenno of Boston.

Mrs. Prentiss L. Coonley of Folly farm, Great Barrington, Mass., is coming to Chicago shortly after the first of the new year to visit her sister, Mrs. Edward L. Hasler.

Mrs. Allen Wilson Delays Sailing.

The Benjamin C. Allens are disappointed that their daughter, Mrs. Allen Wilson, and her son, Benjamin, are not going to be in Chicago for Christmas, but Mrs. Wilson has put off sailing from England until the first part of January.

Mr. and Mrs. Helmuth von Erffa, the former Eleanor Follansbee, have sailed for six months in Europe. As Mr. von Erffa has to go to Egypt, his wife will go first to London and Paris and then to Vienna to wait for him to join her. Mrs. von Erffa's family, the Mitchell D. Follansbees, will celebrate Christmas at home in Chicago.

Mrs. Ralph Hubbart and her daughter, Mrs. Hans Schweiser, will be welcomed home today by Mr. Hubbart and Miss Charlotte Hubbart, and their many friends who are glad that Mrs.

Twins Will Bow at Dinner Dance

Helen Hunter Introduced at Casino Party

Greets Family Friends at Old Fashioned Debut.

BY INDIA MOFFETT.

THE debut tea given yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Garfield King for Miss Helen Hunter was a charming old-fashioned one. Not that it wasn't a strictly modern party, for it was. The affair was held in the Casino.

The party was old-fashioned because the lovely young debutante was making a debut in the traditional manner, being introduced to the old friends of her parents and grandparents. Not all young girls make such old-fashioned debuts in these days, you know.

And all the old friends of Robert Hunter and his wife, the former Gwendolyn Mitchell, and of the late Mr. and Mrs. John J. Mitchell were there to meet the tall, dark haired young lady who had come from her home in Pasadena to meet these old friends and to have a holiday whirl in the city where her family is so well known and where so many of her relatives live.

The King and Mitchell families not only are closely connected by old friendship but they are doubly related by marriage, for William H. Mitchell is married to the former Ginevra King and Clarence B. Mitchell's wife is the former Marjorie King. So it seemed especially nice and fitting that Mrs. King should be the one to present pretty young Helen to the hundreds of men—yes, there were as many men as women at the tea—and women who were there.

Miss Hunter Wears Green and Gold Lame.

Mrs. King and Miss Hunter and the latter's grandaunt, Mrs. Charles Adams of Honolulu, received in the oval reception room, which was even more attractive than usual with many vases of white flowers decorating it. The debutante wore a gown of green and gold lamé, with a band of sable outlining the neckline, which was high in front, and she carried a bouquet of scarlet euphorbia, green orchids, and valley lilies. Mrs. King wore a corsage of deep purple orchids pinned at the waist of her wild blackberry velvet gown and Mrs. Adams had pinned her green orchids to the shoulder of her black gown. Mrs. King and Mrs. Adams both wore black hats, but the debutante's shining and smoothly waved hair was uncovered.

The long tea table in the oval ballroom was covered with a silver cloth edged in six inch silver lace, and taking turns pouring tea and coffee at the ends were the Misses Jean Schweppe, Mary Reed, Jean Wilhelm,

MELTING pot bubble. He was a very little boy and he eyed Santa Claus in the toy department for some time before he got up enough courage to speak to him. Finally he said timidly.

"Hello, Santa Claus."

THE Passavant Memorial hospital's children's party yesterday would have aroused the Christmas spirit had it been lacking in any of the participants and observers. Dark-eyed Italian children, little blonde girls with their hair in pigtails, Negro boys and girls and swarthy Mexican children, all from the Northwestern university clinic, circled and sang "A tisket, a tasket, a green and yellow basket"—until the sound of sleighbells in the corridor announced the arrival of Santa Claus. There he was, very plump and jolly, blue eyes smiling above his white whiskers. He called most of the children by name as he distributed the presents, sweaters, and candy and toys for each child. Later there was cocoa and sandwiches and ice cream. We came away wondering about a dark-skinned little Mexican child named Frances Chabira, whose doll was a Mexican niña—its skin several shades darker than her own. The doll was a particularly beguiling one, as a matter of fact, but we wondered whether she liked it better, having skin dark like her own, or whether she would have preferred a Nordic doll. . . . Who can tell what goes on in the hearts of children?

MRS. LEE GOODMAN of Aurora tells about the child of a neighbor who recently acquired a new wild west outfit. A visitor, observing the chap, the sombrero, the gun, and the cartridge belt, inquired:

"What's your name, Deadeye Dick? Or, perhaps, Buffalo Bill?"

The child eyed the visitor in some perplexity.

"Call me Goldilocks," he finally said hesitantly.

YOU'VE probably heard that one of the reasons Chicago Grand opera, which opens Dec. 26, is being held at the new opera house instead of the Auditorium is because the scenery and costumes are thus made available. However, Marion Claire, who is to sing in "Traviata" next Wednesday night, looked through the entire wardrobe department without being able to find a Violetta costume small enough to fit her. It seems that in spite of the fact that Violetta is supposed to be frail and sickly the rôle previously has been sung by prima donnas of substantial girth. When Miss Claire, who wears a size 14, tried on the smallest Violetta gown she could find, it went around her twice.

WE keep hearing the surprising language used by carefully brought up children. The latest story of the kind concerns Nancy, the daughter of Lieut. and Mrs. John Hinton [Betty Fitts], who recently celebrated her third birthday anniversary. Her father was away from Fort Sheridan on her birthday, so he telegraphed her. It was the first telegram Nancy had received and her mother endeavored to explain telegrams to her. She listened with concentration, then commented:

"Well, I'll be a cock eyed peanut."

New York Group Will Present Season of Opera at Low Prices

New York, Dec. 21.—(AP)—For the first time in many years New York will have two grand opera companies this year.

This was assured tonight by the announcement that the New York Opera association—with backing by persons prominent socially and financially—will open in mid-January with low priced operas at the Hippodrome.

W. Fulton Melhuish, who turned opera impresario after working for the government as a dollar a year man in the world war supervising the production of motor trucks for army use, will be general manager and artistic director of the venture.

Melhuish formed the New York Opera association, a nonprofit corporation, two years ago to present weekly operas by radio. At the request of many singers of the old Chicago Civic opera, who wanted to gain a livelihood by teaching, he formed the New York School of Vocal Art.

Melhuish said he would announce his list of singers, many of whom will be former Chicago civic stars and former members of the Metropolitan opera, within a week or two.

Young Israel.

Young Israel of Chicago will hold a ball Sunday evening in the grand ballroom of the Hotel La Salle as a feature of the third annual midwestern Young Israel conference, starting today and closing Christmas day. Helmer J. Weiner is the general chairman.

Astor-Gillespie Nuptials Will Be Held Before Lent

New York, Dec. 21.—[Special.]—Information from a reliable source is to the effect that the marriage of Miss Eileen S. S. Gillespie to John Jacob Astor will take place before the Lenten period.

Owing to the prevailing conditions it is understood there will be no lavish expense, and it is the wish of the family that the wedding and church decorations will be very simple. There will be the usual bridesmaids and ushers. There will be a small reception for close relatives and members of the two families.

Society Turns Out for First View of 'Alice'

Maternity Center Benefits from Premiere.

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

Ermine clad society went to the movies last night to live again a childhood thrill. The film version of Lewis Carroll's classic, "Alice in Wonderland," was having its world premiere in the Grand ballroom of the Stevens hotel for the benefit of the Chicago Maternity Center.

It was a light hearted evening with the hundreds of friends of the Maternity Center coming at 8:30 for a musical interlude and remaining after the film for dancing in the ballroom foyer. Dr. Joseph B. DeLee, to whom this fundamental charity owes its beginning, was among the guests.

"No wonder Charlotte Henry said she didn't know any of Hollywood's screen celebrities when she finished making this picture," commented Dr. DeLee to Clark J. Lawrence. "How could she be expected to know Skeets Gallagher, Richard Arlen, Jack Oakie, and all the rest of them dressed up as Tweedledee and Tweedledum, the Mad Hatter, and the March Hare."

Charlotte Henry is the 17 year old blonde darling who captured the title rôle of "Alice in Wonderland" from 6,800 other girls in a world-wide competition. All of the Maternity Center directors who met her a fortnight ago when she passed through the city on her way from Hollywood to New York appreciated the film last night just a little more keenly than the rest of their friends.

"She is just the type of child Lewis Carroll created when he described 'a girl of pure unclouded brow and dreaming eyes of wonder,'" Mrs. James L. Houghteling agreed with a half dozen of her friends. Mrs. Houghteling, wearing a warm blue velvet wrap, fox trimmed, was entertaining with Mr. Houghteling Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. John Stuart.

Near the Houghteling party in the box "square" that occupied the center of the ballroom were Mr. and Mrs. Clark J. Lawrence with Mr. and Mrs. Norman H. MacLeish and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Tenney as their guests. Just before the lights were dimmed for the picture Mr. Lawrence read a dozen telegrams from members of the film cast expressing their interest in last night's premiere. "Hope that any worries you may have will disappear down the rabbit hole," was the message to Dr. DeLee from Skeets Gallagher.

Beautifully gowned in red bagheera covered by a sable trimmed wrap, Mrs. Chauncey McCormick brought her young son, Roger, home from Groton for the holidays, to see the movie. Mrs. McCormick arrived just before Mrs. Silas H. Strawn, who was hostess to a party that included Mrs. David S. Cook Jr., Miss Florence Bartlett, and Mrs. Edward Partridge.

From the style standpoint, two members of the audience who attracted attention were the Laird Bells' daughters, Helen and Frances. With a crisp brown taffeta gown corded at the bottom, Helen wore a turquoise blue velvet headdress. Even more striking was the wine red velvet ensemble in which Frances appeared. With a matching hood, ermine trimmed, she looked like she might have stepped out of wonderland.

Miss Frances True, in vivid green satin with a lei of brown coq feathers about her shoulders, was the head usher, while Miss Katherine Healy striking in red satin, had little trouble pinning gardenias in most masculine lapels.

Lilian Harvey, John Boles in This Gay Film

Produced by Fox.
Directed by John Blystone.
Presented at the Palace theater.

THE CAST.

Lili ..... Lilian Harvey
King Rupert ..... John Boles
Stigmat ..... El Brendel
Queen Mother ..... Irene Browne
Mamma Watcheck ..... Maude Eburne
De Conti ..... Henry Stephenson
Weininger ..... Herman Bing

By Mae Tinée.

Good Morning!

This is a gay and fetching number, light as froth and unreal as Santa Claus. It is one of those mythical kingdom pictures.

Chief figures in the romance are a young king and a pretty would-be café entertainer.

Lili is a poor girl out of a job. Her landlady is importunate and her talent unremarkable.

The king's chauffeur, out of pity, takes her home from the beer garden where she has been a conspicuous failure and from whose manager she has just received her walking papers—in His Majesty's brand new car . . .

Next morning Lili is famous. She has been seen alighting from the great white machine and it's all over town that none other than this poor little middle class maiden is the king's favorite . . .

His Majesty, who cares more about composing music than he does for ruling his province, at the time is in a quandary. If the royal budget is to be balanced he must wed a certain princess in whom he has no interest whatsoever.

The Lili rumor reaches his ears and he starts out incognito to investigate . . .

His tour of inspection results in—the results the picture shall reveal.

Miss Harvey is picturesquely eccentric as the confused Lili. She is a doll-like creature of many artificialities. She is patently self-conscious—in a manner, however, that is childlike and unobjectionable. She's full of life and, you can see, most awfully anxious to please. They do say the remarkable automobile featured in "My Lips Betray" is her own.

John Boles is a romantic figure as the king and he sings a song or two most delightfully.

Maude Eburne, Irene Browne, Henry Stephenson, and Herman Bing play character rôles in telling fashion. The picture is nicely staged and directed. Action is swift and fairly amusing.

See you tomorrow!

Mrs. Roosevelt Has Party for Poor Children

Leaves Wedding for Annual Union Affair.

New York, Dec. 21.—(AP)—In the finery in which she had just come from a wedding, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt played lady bountiful at a Christmas party for 40 poor children today.

Yesterday she had decorated the tree in the headquarters of the Women's Trade Union league, and some time in the interval she had procured the presents.

Today, wearing a long blue velvet gown, she stood in a crowded room and handed out sweaters, toys, candy, and apples to rows of scrubbed and fresh-faced children. The children were all very good, and scarcely any of them opened the boxes they had been told to keep intact until they got home.

Mrs. Roosevelt laughed as she presented to one of the tiniest boys a box that was bigger than he was. "You're very small," she said gently. Since spectators were curious, this little boy did open his box to show a workmanlike tool chest.

Crowded in the back room of the old fashioned house where the league has its headquarters were unemployed girls from the club room which Mrs. Roosevelt has established for them on the ground floor of the building.

After she had handed out the presents Mrs. Roosevelt went downstairs to look at the clubroom. For many years it has been Mrs. Roosevelt's custom to preside at a Christmas party at the league.

The wedding she attended was that of Mrs. June Hamilton Rhodes and Ferdinand Doan Sanford, at the Reformed Church of Harlem. Mrs. Roosevelt gave the bride away. She sat in the front row on the aisle and arose as the wedding party reached the altar.

Every one, including the bride, was dressed in blue velvet. She and Mrs. Roosevelt became friends during Alfred E. Smith's campaign for President in 1928, when Mrs. Roosevelt directed women's activities and Mrs. Rhodes directed the publicity.

Mrs. Roosevelt did not go to the wedding reception afterward but hurried down to the Christmas party, without bothering with a police escort. Asked whether she had any plans for the evening, she said, "I'm just a private citizen from now on." Earlier in the day she had done some Christmas shopping.

PARTY AND SONG PUT CHICAGO IN CHRISTMAS MOOD

Friends Arriving; Benefits Aid Needy Youth.

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

The warm friendliness of the Christmas season tightened its hold upon Chicago yesterday in countless parties and festivities where the needy were entertained or where friends met in Yuletide fellowship.

Gay greetings rang out in the railroad stations where relatives and friends met bundle laden young people home from school for the holidays. All over town carolers sang the old songs while tired shoppers paused to listen. Salvation Army lasses added musical cheer to the traffic along State street and the Volunteer of America Santa Clauses smiled and bowed to young and old.

In the hotels lighted Christmas trees burned the entire day and into the night, admired by throngs of youngsters brought downtown for Christmas parties. Luncheons and dinners, teas and dances were spiced with the pleasant expectancy of presents and Santa Clauses and entertainment. Many a party was enjoyed the more because the proceeds were to go to make poor children happy.

Ad Men Give Benefit.

Among these was the luncheon of the Chicago advertising men and women for the benefit of the Off-the-Street club. About 600 professional men and women gathered at the Hotel Sherman with 14 coöperating organizations. Not the least important on the list of headliners on the vaudeville program, which included radio and stage stars, was the harmonica concert given by eight members of the Off-the-Street club. O. C. Harn was general chairman.

In the same hotel 200 members of the Ohio society attended a party with presents, Santa Claus and all the trimmings. In the Tavern club office girls of the Curtis Publishing company assembled, arriving in costumes of the gay nineties.

The traditional American Christmas program was given by children of Daughters of the American Revolution during the afternoon in the Stevens hotel. They presented a sketch, "Bringing in the Yule Log," and there were recitations and songs on such subjects as "The Night Before Christmas," and "A True Christmas Story of the Indians." Charles Franklin Green Jr., 15 years old, presided over a model meeting of the junior organization, the Children of the American Revolution.

Druggists Get Stockings.

Last night 250 druggists received Christmas stockings with 150 assorted "drug store" presents at their 31st annual party of the Chicago Drug and Chemical association in the Stevens hotel. In addition there were fifteen acts of vaudeville. Edward L. Drach is president of the association.

More than 1,600 disabled veterans at Edward Hines Jr. hospital had their Christmas party yesterday when they were visited by the cast of "Lady Be Nice," musical revue playing at the Blackstone theater, and were treated to the complete show in costume. Jimmy Cassidy's orchestra was in the pit. Many of the men watched the show in bathrobes and wheel chairs.

One of the largest parties today will be the one given for 1,000 needy children by 500 Episcopal laymen who are members of the Church Club of Chicago. The party, to be held in the Hotel Sherman, will include turkey dinner, presents, and a Christmas tree. Other proceeds will be used to aid the Episcopal settlement houses.

Children whose parents' marital troubles brought them into court during the last year will be guests at a party this afternoon by Judge Gibson E. Gorman in the Court of Domestic Relations. About 500 invitations have been issued. The court room and adjacent nursery has been decorated and a huge evergreen three weighted down with colored lights and tinsel has been erected in the court room.

Show at City Shelter.

A musical show for 1,800 men who are temporarily out of work will be sponsored tonight at the Municipal shelter No. 2, 54 West Austin avenue, by Judge Edgar A. Jonas.

Mrs. Santa Claus distributed candy to boys and girls of the grammar schools in the poorer sections of the city yesterday under the direction of the Salvation Army. Tomorrow the Army will give various Christmas parties for underprivileged youngsters where toys will be distributed.

The bureau of social service of the department of public welfare will hold Christmas parties in all the shelters for 5,000 homeless men and women on Sunday at 3 p. m. There will be Christmas trees and gifts donated by merchants, and entertainment, Mrs. Elizabeth A. Conkey, head of the department, announced.

Tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock members of the Children's Civic Music association will sing Christmas carols around the forty foot tree in the Hotel Stevens lobby, and afterward will attend a party in the children's playland as guests of the hotel.

Blue Devils Plan Party.

Members of the Blue Devils, an organization of French-Americans living in Chicago, will hold a Christmas party at the Medinah Michigan avenue club tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock for a number of poor children. Rene Weiller, French consul, and Lewis Bernays, consul general of Great Britain, will attend. An entertainment for the youngsters will be followed by refreshments and distribution of gifts.

About 350 needy youngsters were given a Christmas party last night at St. Dominick's school, Sedgwick street and Chicago avenue, by the Big Sisters, Catholic women's charitable organization. A huge turkey dinner was topped off with gifts.

Child carolers gathered yesterday to sing around the first outdoor Christmas crib in the city in the Grotto of Our Lady of Victory church, Agatite avenue near Lockwood. The grotto and shrine was constructed from 150 tons of Tufa stone dredged from mineral beds near Sandusky, O.

Programs commemorating the Christmas holiday were held yesterday and will continue today in the schools. Many of the schools also will distribute Christmas baskets to the needy and to the old people in institutions. At the Spaulding school for crippled children the pupils are to be treated to a Christmas lunch and program today.

Surprise! I've been saving it up for you for weeks, for never could I seem to find the correct moment to bring it in. But now there appears to be something of a breathing spell between Thanksgiving and Christmas, so let's have it!

Thanks for the surprise go to Theresa K., a reader-friend of ours here in Chicago. And the treat itself is an array of genuine, 100 per cent Polish recipes which make excellent eating, if we follow them faithfully, whether we can manage to pronounce them or not. Says Lady K. (don't know whether she's Miss or Mrs.): "I'll give these Polish recipes by their native names. I've lived among the Poles all my life and have found many excellent cooks among them."

The curtain raiser is for Leniewe Pierogi, which being interpreted means "Lazy Little Dumplings," supposedly because they're so simple to make. Polish families use them as dumplings to be served with the meat course. Then, on fast days, they turn about and use them as the main course. And if you have some left over, advises T. K., they're excellent when fried the next day. Here is the way of them:

LENIEWE PIEROGI (POLISH).
Lazy Little Dumplings.

1 pound dry cottage cheese
1 cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
5 egg yolks
1 tablespoon butter

Press the cheese through a colander or mash with a wooden potato masher. Mix to a smooth mass with the butter, egg yolks, salt, and flour. Form the dough into a roll about one and one-half inches in diameter and then cut into crosswise slices about three-quarters of an inch thick. Cook these in boiling, salted water fifteen to twenty minutes. Serve them by pouring melted butter and sprinkling buttered crumbs over the drained pierogi. You may add sugar or sugar and cinnamon.

Next for a recipe, also typically Polish, about which our friend writes, "I can see the look on your face when you see the blood soup recipe!" But I fooled her. For she's not the first I have heard laud this interesting dish. So here it is:

CZARINA (DARK SOUP).

1 pound spare ribs
Liver, heart, and wings of duck
¼ pound prunes
¼ pound dried pears
¼ cup raisins
1 medium sized apple, quartered
1 tablespoon flour
2½ to 3 quarts water
½ cup duck blood and vinegar mixture*
Cloves, allspice, peppercorns, salt, bayleaf, and onion may be added as desired for flavoring
1 glass grape jelly also if desired

*Butchers in Polish neighborhoods usually have this blood-and-vinegar mixture on hand when they have ducks.

To prepare the soup, cook the meat pieces and the fruit together in water until the meat and fruits are soft and the meat has cooked out its flavor. Remove the meat, then strain the remaining soup, mashing it through a colander. Add water to dilute somewhat. Thicken the blood-and-vinegar mixture with flour, then slowly pour the combination into the hot soup, boiling it for thirty minutes with constant stirring to avoid curdling. Add sugar to taste and serve with small dumplings.

T. K. suggests that she make up a cream puff recipe for the dumpling to be used with this soup, using a little less fat than the recipe calls for.

And lastly comes another Polish dumpling which likely isn't so "lazy" as the other:

CHEESE PIEROGI.
Filling

¾ pound dry cottage cheese
Salt to taste
1 tablespoon butter
Grated rind of one lemon
3 egg yolks
Sugar to taste

NOODLE DOUGH.

2 egg yolks
1 teaspoon butter
¼ teaspoon salt
Water

Combine the flour, beaten egg yolks, salt, and softened butter, adding enough water to make a soft dough. Knead well, then roll out the dough into a thin sheet and cut into about 3½ inch squares. Place a spoonful of the filling (all ingredients thoroughly blended) on each square and fold to form a triangle. Dampen the edges and press them securely together. Now cook these filled triangles in boiling, salted water for fifteen to twenty minutes. Drain and fry them in butter for a few minutes until browned. Serve sprinkled with buttered crumbs and sugar or topped with whipped and sweetened sour cream.

Triple Golden Wedding Anniversary Scheduled

Carbondale, Ill., Dec. 21.—A triple golden wedding anniversary in which three members of one family are principals, will take Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Kimmell of Elkville, near here, to Brazeau, Mo., Dec. 27. Mrs. Kimmell's two brothers—J. E. Milster and George R. Milster, the latter a twin of Mrs. Kimmell—and their mates are the other principals.

RELATIVES MAKE HOLIDAY CALL ON DR. WYNEKOOP

Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop, who is to be tried for the murder of her daughter-in-law, Rheta, entertained pre-Christmas visitors yesterday in her cell at the county jail. Her son, Walker, her daughter, Dr. Katherine Wynekoop, and her sister, Mrs. Mabel Faircloe of Peoria, appeared at the jail with presents of food and clothing.

They were allowed to visit with Dr. Wynekoop for thirty minutes and emerged with a request that the prisoner be allowed to attend church services on Christmas day. Warden David Moneypenny sent word to Dr. Wynekoop that she would be allowed to attend Episcopal services to be held in the jail.

Dr. Francis W. McNamara, jail physician, reported that Dr. Wynekoop's physical condition is greatly improved. Her case is set for trial on Jan. 4.

COAL DELIVERYMAN SEIZED.

Fred Faber, 1618 West 80th street, was arrested yesterday by City Sealer Joe Grein on a charge of delivering coal in Chicago without a public weighmaster's ticket certifying the weight, or a city license.

Household Hints

After enjoying a jar of canned fruits or vegetables wash and dry the jar, put the top on, and set the jar on a shelf reserved for the purpose. When canning season arrives next year much time and trouble in gathering and matching jars and covers will be saved.

Keep one shelf in the pantry stocked with canned foods in readiness for the unexpected guest.

Miners' and CWA Checks Brighten Business Outlook

Harrisburg, Ill., Dec. 21.—[Special.]—Pay checks for $65,000 will be given by the Sahara Coal company to Saline county miners this Saturday. Miners in this county received checks for more than $100,000 on Dec. 15. Those pay rolls, with more than $40,000 for CWA workers between Dec. 15 and Christmas, brightened the business outlook for the county. The Peabody mines, employing 1,400 men, still are idle.

MILLING GRAINS OFTEN DESTROYS DIETARY NEEDS

Although vitamins B and G occur in a wide variety of foods in relatively small amounts, only a few concentrated sources are known. The germ and seed coat of whole grains are among the most important of these.

Since the germ tends to become rancid and the bran detracts from the appearance of the product, when the grain is milled these parts are generally removed and used for animal feeds. Often the food constituents lost in this way are the very ones lacking in the diets of those who use large quantities of highly milled grains and prepared cereals.

Thinking that these milling by-products might be profitably used in human dietaries, specialists recently studied wheat germ, whole wheat, rice polishings, cottonseed flour, and the residue from fermented rye grains. In a previous study made in South Carolina wheat germ was found to be a palatable food and also to be valuable in preventing pellagra.

YULE DINNER AT COST LEVEL OF 19 YEARS AGO

Turkeys About Same as Last Season.

BY PAUL POTTER.

Christmas dinners will be as low, if not lower, in cost this week-end than they have been in more than 19 years. While some items in the typical menu may be somewhat higher than a year ago several important foods have been reduced within the last few days to more than offset these increases.

New low prices will be found by today's Chicagoland shoppers on butter, bacon, eggs, oranges, nuts, and fancy table grapes. The turkeys also are about as low priced as they were last Christmas, when a new record low price was registered. Even some of the meats like pork and beef are lower than they were last Christmas, with ducks, geese, and roasting chickens all cheaper.

Plenty of Turkeys.

There are plenty of turkeys, with some left over for New Year's day dinners. The best ones are costing between 25 and 30 cents a pound, with some as low as 17 and 18 cents a pound. There is a limited supply of the smaller birds, weighing 9 to 12 pounds.

The drop in butter prices of 3 to 5 cents a pound, almost overnight, has been the big surprise to food shoppers this week. It is traceable to a drastic decline in butter prices on all markets of the nation since the federal government stopped its heavy purchases of butter to be fed to the unemployed this winter.

The reduced prices in pork cuts, hams, and bacon, especially in the latter, have been noted this week as the aftermath of declines in wholesale prices paid to farmers.

Rush Hogs to Market.

The farmers have been marketing hogs and beef cattle at an accelerated rate in recent weeks, and prices have declined as a result. Consumers also have learned that the processing tax imposed on pork is being taken from the prices paid to farmers, and are less willing to pay higher prices as some butchers have demanded, using the tax as their pretext.

Cranberries have advanced somewhat in price since Thanksgiving, but are still about the same as at this season last year. Nutmeats are lower, especially Brazils, pecans, and mixed selections. Candies and cookies, specially prepared for the holiday trade, are reasonably priced and as attractively packaged as are the fruit cakes.

Bargains in Fruits.

The bargains in citrus fruits, especially oranges, insure ample supplies at low prices until some time in January when it is expected oranges will become somewhat more expensive. The federal agricultural adjustment administration has approved an agreement between producers of citrus fruits in California, Arizona, and the gulf states, enabling them to restrict their shipments in an effort to boost prices.

Tomatoes are about the only vegetables at all high in price, most of these coming from the southlands or nearby hothouses. Sweet potatoes, yams, brussel sprouts, cabbage, lettuce, green peas and green beans, carrots, beets, artichoke, escarole, taurnips, spinach, cucumbers, peppers, endive, parsnips, parsley, eggplant, broccoli, lima beans, and cauliflower all are available in local markets at quite reasonable prices.

Xmas Bread for Breakfast! Here Is How You Make It

BY MABEL BRYANT.

Christmas being the last great festival of the year, it is with most persons the favorite. The Christmas dinner is always a big part of the day's celebration, but we think it should be preceded by a breakfast which will take care of us until the time arrives for the big spread. So what would be better than delicious Christmas bread for breakfast with its tempting golden brown crust done to a turn and shielding 'neath the crust gobs of raisins, currants, spices, and, if you wish, some citron thrown in for good measure?

Christmas breakfasts may vary. There are those who simply must have their ham and eggs. There are those who crave pancakes and sausage no matter what time of the year it is. Be that as it may, many persons can go on a coffee cake or bread spree and ask for nothing else, for well made coffee cake or bread spread with delicious fresh creamery butter, coffee, and fruit is a breakfast fit for any king.

Just take a peep into the kitchen of a home where the wife or mother spends her time in planning tasty food for the man of her heart and her little flock of youngsters and you will find good old fashioned Christmas bread in the making. It couldn't be kept for a surprise, for its fragrant aroma when it is removed from the oven permeates through the whole house with the spices and good things which are contained in such an offering.

Raisin Bread.

Here is a recipe for an excellent raisin bread:

4½ cups flour.
1 cake yeast.
1½ cups scalded milk.
¼ cup sugar.
1½ cups raisins.
2 eggs.
¼ cup butter.
1 teaspoon salt.
Cinnamon and nutmeg to taste.

Dissolve yeast in scalded milk; when luke warm add 1½ cups flour and mix smooth; let stand until light and fluffy, add eggs, sugar, butter, raisins, salt, and remainder of flour and spices. Mix to stiff dough and knead thoroughly. Let stand until double in volume. Divide into two equal parts, roll each part into strips 12 inches long, tapering to a point. Press ends together and braid. Place on buttered sheet, allow to stand until light. Bake one-half to three-quarters of an hour. When cool, ice with icing made with a little hot water and pulverized sugar and flavor with vanilla if you wish.

Date and Nut Bread.

Another breakfast bread which is a great favorite and not at all hard to make by the most inexperienced cook is called date and nut bread. It is one of our recipes but, having the true Christmas spirit, we are passing it on to our readers.

3 teaspoons baking powder.
1 teaspoon salt.
½ teaspoon cinnamon.
½ teaspoon nutmeg.
½ cup sugar.
¾ cup walnut meats.
1 cup pitted dates.
1 egg.
1½ cups milk.

Sift flour, baking powder, salt, sugar, and spices together. Add well beaten egg to the milk and add this mixture to flour and stir thoroughly. Put into well greased pan and let stand for 30 minutes. Bake in moderate oven for one hour.

Should one of these recipes for bread be your choice, be sure you cut enough when serving it, for we read in an old book which contained some interesting and queer superstitions in connection with Christmas food that if bread is left on the table after the Christmas meal it means there will be plenty in your larder for the next 12 months.

FOR SWEETNESS A LA MODE TRY FUDGE PARTIES

No matter how much candy Santa stuffs in the toes of the stockings on Christmas eve, there never seems to be enough to last through the holidays. And since it's so much fun to make it ourselves, let's plan on some taffy pulls, fudge parties, and we'll want to make divinity, popcorn balls, candied fruits, Turkish paste, toffee, butterscotch, fondant, and marshmallows too.

These recipes and many others are to be found in Mary Meade's newest booklet, "Candies That Are Fun to Make," which is sold for 3 cents at the Tribune Public Service office, 1 South Dearborn street. Or send 5 cents for the booklet to Mary Meade, Tribune Tower.

EASILY FOOLED IN SIZE OF CANS OF CANNED GOODS

Amherst, Mass., Dec. 21.—[Special.]—The average housewife, who guesses at the size of cans, may easily be fooled when she buys canned foods, says Miss May E. Foley, extension specialist in foods at the Massachusetts State college.

Foods are packed in no less than 27 different sizes of cans, says Miss Foley, and some of them are so designed that it is difficult to judge the exact size without reading the label. However, the net weight of the contents is indicated on the label, and so the buyer can make sure she gets her money's worth if she only takes the time to look at the label before she buys.

Vegetables are commonly packed in No. 2 cans, which hold about 20 ounces. But there is another can, No. 303, which is just an eighth of an inch shorter and a quarter of an inch narrower—so it may easily be mistaken for a No. 2—which holds only 16 ounces. These weights are indicated on the label. Sometimes when the housewife thinks she is getting a bargain at "three cans for a quarter" she is really buying the No. 303 cans instead of the No. 2 cans, and is paying more for the vegetables than if she bought No. 2 cans at the regular price.

There is a No. 1 can and a No. 1 tall can, the same diameter, but different in height. The No. 1 can holds about 10 ounces, while the No. 1 tall can holds about 16 ounces, about the same as the 303 can.

As a general rule canned food will cost less per pound if it is bought in large cans than if bought in small cans, such as the No. 1 or the buffet size, which holds only 8 ounces.

Butterworth, Former Yale Grid Star, Sued for Divorce

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 21.—(AP)—An application for divorce has been filed in superior court here by Mrs. Esther Stoddard Butterworth whose husband is Frank S. Butterworth, sportsman and former Yale football star.

Mrs. Butterworth alleges desertion since June 1, 1928. She is the daughter of the late Ezekiel Stoddard, and sister of Major Louis E. Stoddard, former international polo player.

FIND ILLINOIS FARMERS DOING OWN BUTCHERING

Avoid Federal Processing Tax on Hogs.

Illinois families are doing their own butchering for their families' meat supply, a survey showed yesterday. The meat they process themselves runs to more than 150 million pounds of pork a year, in addition to quantities of beef, veal, lamb, and poultry.

The home butchering of meat animals has increased this winter, the survey indicated, largely due to the savings which farmers and small independent butchers find they can make, and the added cost of the federal processing tax on hogs, which now amounts to $1 a hundred pounds. By Feb. 1, the tax will amount to 2 cents a pound, live weight, in accordance with rulings made by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

May Avoid Processing Tax.

Farmers may butcher any number of hogs for their own use or that of tenants without paying the processing tax. Should any of the sausage, hams, pickled meats, or other products be sold, however, the tax is to be paid. Meat experts advise the selection of barrows or gilts weighing between 200 and 250 pounds each for the best meat, and point out that the animals should not be fed the evening prior to butchering.

The principal cuts of pork obtained by farmers are the ham, loin, bacon, shoulder, and head. Lard, sausage, spare ribs, pork chops, and pork tenderloin are obtained from the loin, side and shoulder.

For those who tire of fresh pork, or have an over supply of it, there are various methods of curing, pickling, and canning the excess stocks to be used as needed. The refuse, according to recommendations of Prof. Sleeter Bull of the University of Illinois, should either be burned or boiled and rendered. Bones may be crushed or ground for chicken feed.

Much Home Canning.

Home canning of pork and pork products is being widely practiced this winter. It insures a variety of cuts, provides for emergency meals, utilizes all the available meat at butchering time, makes the farmer independent of weather for his meat supply, and enables him to butcher when the animal has reached the right condition.

The meat may or may not be browned before packing. It is packed into the containers, with water added in some instances, leaving some air space at the top to allow for the swelling of the meat when heated. The filled jars or cans are preheated in the steam in pressure cookers or in a kettle of hot water. One to two teaspoons of salt should be added to each quart.

Pint jars are heated for 40 minutes and quart containers for 60 minutes, then the covers are put on and the containers dropped at once into pressure cookers or hot kettles. When thoroughly cooked they are removed, and the covers sealed down tight after cooling.

All pork and pork products should be well cooked, experts advise, in order to prevent the possibility of any contamination or trichinosis.

NEW BAHAMA ISLANDS BISHOP CONSECRATED AT IMPRESSIVE RITES

New York, Dec. 21.—[Special.]—The Rt. Rev. John Bernard Kevenhoerster, who was prior and pastor of St. Anselm's Benedictine church in the Bronx for 20 years, was consecrated prefect apostolic of the Bahama islands in a long ceremony in St. Patrick's cathedral today. The services began with a procession escorting Cardinal Hayes from his residence to the cathedral. In the procession were two archbishops, eighteen bishops, two abbots-ordinary, nine abbots, 250 priests, and a dozen papal knights.

The consecration took place before the high altar of the cathedral, with all the pomp and circumstance demanded by the church for such occasions. Cardinal Hayes personally consecrated the new bishop.

The Bahama islands are in the archdiocese of New York.

By ELIZABETH JORDAN

SYNOPSIS.

Bruce Pomeroy, brought up in poverty, befriended a Russian, Boris Orleneff. In return Orleneff, before his death, left Pomeroy an invention, which is about to make Pomeroy a millionaire. Orleneff stipulated that his brother's family, whom he considered parasites, were not to get a cent from the invention. While walking through New York's Central park one winter's morning Pomeroy is kidnaped and taken to a small island off the coast of Maine, where he is made a prisoner in a luxurious home, but kept on a starvation diet. His captor is Boris Orleneff, nephew of the inventor. Boris' cousins, Cyril and Olga Norrikoff, assisted in the abduction. They want Pomeroy to make a settlement. He refuses. Boris invites Pomeroy to join the family circle downstairs. The older members are unaware that Pomeroy is an involuntary guest. He is impressed by Boris' sister, Irma, and his mother. Pomeroy manages to elude his guard, Grateful, and get out of his room, but a raging storm makes escape impossible. Olga Norrikoff offers to help him escape if he will take her to New York. She tells him they are all starving. That the house was lent to them for the winter. Boris and Cyril hadn't been able to get work. Pomeroy gives Grateful money to buy food. He visits Andy Mason, caretaker of the island estate, and enlists his aid. Pomeroy suspects Grateful is hatching a plot to do away with him and has a showdown.

INSTALLMENT XXIX.

THE SUBJECT OF LOVE.

"For Gawd's sake, pipe down," Grateful muttered. He was hunched forward in his chair, staring at the floor. "There's nottin' in it. Wat t'hell," he croaked feebly.

"You bet there's nothing in it," Pomeroy agreed. "Your scheme is the most damn fool notion any sensible man ever let run away with him. Now I'll show you why it won't work. In the first place you can't take me by surprise, as you're planning to do. I'm on my guard every minute. I haven't let you get behind me for two days. Perhaps you've noticed that. I didn't accept your kind invitation to the cellar. I think you noticed that, too. You're no match for me in a fair fight and I don't think that fact has escaped your attention, either. But assuming for the sake of argument that you could make away with me, do you know what would happen? I'll tell you."

Again he straightened and delivered his words eye to eye.

Grateful was sagging in his chair. He did not raise his eyes from the floor.

"You've probably decided that if in the end things broke wrong and you got caught," Pomeroy went on, "you'd make a last grandstand play by confessing the crime and absolving the boss. Then, you thought, you'd soon die, and the boss would put up a monument to your memory. But it wouldn't come out that way, Grateful," he ended impressively, drawing his chair closer to the other man and leaning forward. "It wouldn't come out that way, at

Love was the next subject he himself had meant to introduce.

all. The boss is your fellow conspirator. He helped to kidnap me, and in the eyes of the law he would be exactly as guilty of the murder as you yourself. You will realize that, if you stop to think. Instead of holding you in loving memory he would be going through the long torture of a life term with you. It's a life term for murder here in Maine, you know. And he wouldn't be feeling friendly to you, Grateful. He'd be hating you like hell!"

Grateful got up and staggered toward the door. The pasty white of his face had taken on a deeper blue. He had difficulty in breathing. Pomeroy shook his head.

"Sorry to excite you," he said. "But of course I had to make you understand that the jig is up. I threw a monkey wrench into your plans this very afternoon. I called on Andy Mason and told him the whole story of the kidnaping. He believes it. He has my name and my New York address. You'd have to kill him, too, if you killed me, to keep the thing quiet—and I don't believe you want to go in for such wholesale slaughter. Besides, Andy would certainly be missed by his friends here in the Harbor even if I wasn't."

His back against the door, as if he needed its support, Grateful stood and looked at him for a long moment. It was a look so hopeless, so desperate, so despairing, that Pomeroy actually experienced a pang of sympathy for the misguided wretch. Then the door opened, and Grateful passed out in silence.

Pomeroy gave him time to get out of the way. Then he unbolted his own door and went thoughtfully downstairs.

He was disappointed to find the big room empty. It appeared to have been empty for some time, for the fire was almost out.

Pomeroy desired to see Irma Orleneff. He had been wanting to see her all day. To find her absent from the setting where his memory had pictured her was a disappointment whose magnitude startled him. Another revelation followed in the uprush of relief and pleasure her sudden appearance caused in him. She had entered the room noiselessly and was half way across it before he saw her. He went to meet her. Impetuously he held out his hand.

"I was afraid no one was downstairs," he said banally.

"No one has been, most of the afternoon, though we've drifted in and out occasionally, like restless ghosts. We're all worried about Aunt Zinaida."

"Isn't she any better?"

"No. If anything, she's worse. She seems to have more fever and more difficulty in breathing. You must be having a terribly dull time," she said as they sat down. "I've been in and out of Aunt Zinaida's room all day, so I can take some time off. My mother is with her now. Will you set up the backgammon table?"

"If you like. But I'd rather talk, if you don't mind. You see," Pomeroy hesitated, not sure how much he dared to say, "I don't often have a chance to talk to a girl like you."

"I'm no different from other girls," she said rather coldly.

"I wasn't paying you a stupid compliment," he hastened to explain. "I was merely stating a fact. I've had to work and fight all the way. I haven't had time for any social life. The girls I've met I've known in a business way. Most of them were fine girls—clerks and stenographers in the offices where I worked. I've got some splendid girls now in my factory offices, and a private secretary who tells me when to wear a heavy overcoat and reminds me of my rubbers."

She laughed softly.

"Have you ever had time to make love to those nice girls in your office?"

He was surprised but delighted. Love was the next subject he himself had meant to introduce, and here she had provided it for him.

"The time? Yes. The temptation—no. I had sworn to myself that I'd leave all that sort of thing till I had a real start in my work. Besides, I have a horror of combining business and philandering. If I marry a business woman I'll find her in some one else's offices, not in my own."

"That's interesting. Tell me why you feel that way."

"For two reasons," he said promptly. "I've thought it out pretty carefully. The first reason is that it isn't quite fair to the girl. If the attentions of her employer are embarrassing or objectionable to her, see the position she is in. She can't snub him or turn him down without running the risk of losing her job. In fact, she's pretty sure to lose it if her employer is a smaller natured man. I've seen girls go through such experiences in offices where I've worked."

"I know. And I've heard that there is a lot of philandering in offices. Is there?"

"That depends on the offices," he said promptly. "I'd say there isn't as much as there is supposed to be, but there's more than there ought to be."

She laughed, the low gurgling laugh he loved.

"You have thought it out. What's the second reason?"

"A selfish one. How's the employer going to be sure the girl really cares for him, if she responds to his attentions? She may be tempted by his money, if he has any, or by the hope of a salary advance or a better job."

"Of course. And you want to be loved for yourself alone?"

"Naturally. Who doesn't?"

She looked at him thoughtfully and without self-consciousness. "It must be time for you to look around. You're very successful in business, I'm told."

He flushed darkly. He had suddenly remembered Olga's remark to the effect that they would all be glad to get rid of him. Did this girl dislike him as the rest did? He thought. She's thinking this minute that I'm fattening on her uncle's money, and she probably believes with all the others that I'm robbing her and her family. He could not endure the reflection. He said abruptly. "See here, do you hate me?"

Helen Hunter Introduced at Casino Party

Nancy Morse, Patsy Keith, and Peggy Hixon. Two boxwood pyramids studded with white carnations and crystal and old gilt candelabra decorated the table.

It is seldom that one sees this room, or any other, for that matter, of the Casino decorated, but the baskets of roses that were tied to the pillars six or seven feet above the floor were most effective. The dozens of bouquets that had been sent to the debutante had been separated, so that there were only white flowers in the reception room and only roses in the ballroom, except for one large basket of poinsettia on the piano.

Relatives Assist in Greeting Guests.

Assisting in welcoming the guests and seeing that they all were served with tea were Mrs. William Mitchell, smart in brown wool flecked in gold, a bright green hat, and a sable scarf; her sister-in-law, Mrs. John Payne Kellogg (Louise Mitchell), all in black except for a collar of white silk piqué (she has such alive, dancing eyes she always looks as if she were finding life a very jolly adventure); Mrs. John I. Shaw, the Titian haired King daughter, who was as pretty and as young looking as any debutante there, in a bright green wool dress and a wee black cap; Mr. King, Mr. Mitchell, Mr. Kellogg, Mr. Shaw, and Garfield King, at home from Yale for the holidays and very busy being greeted by young and old.

Some of the many guests were Mrs. J. Ogden Armour, whose only daughter, Lolita, is married to the third of the Mitchell brothers, John J., but who left with her husband and little son on Wednesday for Santa Barbara, so was not at the tea; Mr. and Mrs. William J. Chalmers, Mrs. Dexter Fairbank, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel T. Chase, Mr. and Mrs. James Ward Thorne, Miss Helen Mott and Miss Ruth E. Halling, the late John J. Mitchell's secretaries, who now look after the Mitchell estate and who were so busy saying "How do you do?" to all the Mitchells and the old friends that they hardly could drink their tea; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Hinde, Mr. and Mrs. William O. Goodman, Harold F. McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Goodspeed, Mrs. Moses Wentworth, Mr. and Mrs. Robert N. McCreary, Mrs. Wilhelm L. Baum, Mrs. James R. Offield, Miss Betty Offield, and Mrs. Roy Flannery.

Miss Rebori Bows at Supper Dance.

Another debut that was characterized by the presence of both young and old friends was that of Miss Naneen Rebori, who was introduced at a supper-dance last night by her father, Andrew Rebori. The party was in the ballroom of the Drake, and about 400 attended it.

Miss Rebori, who is at home from Wellesley for the holidays, was radiant in white brocade made very simply. Receiving with her were her father and her brother, Andy Jr., who is at home from Lake Forest academy for the vacation period.

Before the dance Miss Rebori was one of three debutantes given a beautiful dinner party at the Casino by Mrs. Howard Linn. Miss Patsy Keith and Miss Mimi Orr were the other special guests at this party, to which thirty were invited.

Two Debuts Will Be Held Today.

At 8 o'clock tonight Mr. and Mrs. Edwin A. Seipp and their tall and striking looking daughter, Miss Pauline Seipp, will receive 250 guests in the foyer of the Casino club at a dinner-dance Mr. and Mrs. Seipp are giving to introduce Miss Seipp to society.

The debutantes of this season and the bud's most intimate friends and their escorts have been invited to dine and dance and make merry at what is certain to be remembered as one of the best parties of this year, because Mr. and Mrs. Seipp have long been noted for the excellence and perfection of their hospitality.

Miss Seipp attended the University School for Girls and then was graduated from the Mount Vernon seminary in Washington, D. C. She now is in her junior year at Vassar, where she will return at the end of the holidays.

Another young woman making her bow today is Miss Barbara Ann Sargent, daughter of the Chester F. Sargents of Winnetka. Mrs. Sargent is giving a luncheon in the crystal ballroom of the Blackstone hotel, and among the seventy-five guests will be the bud's sub-deb sister, Miss Peggy Sargent, who is a freshman at Smith.

These Chapeaux, Simple to Make, Meet All Needs

WOMEN'SE OR MISSES' HATS.

Just a small piece of material and some of your time are about all needed to make these chic hats. View "A" is for a bright green novelty woolen with a becoming brim that is worn tilted over one eye. It's a banded in grosgrain ribbon.

"B" is for a rust colored velvet off-the-face hat. A gay quill peeks out jauntily from the center front of the crown.

"C" is for a cuffed toque in black antelope with two large decorative buttons.

The pattern, No. 3143, is for small, medium, and large sizes.

New Perfumes a Big Help to Puzzled Male

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Christmas perfumes may come in microscopically sized containers, but they are the most welcome gifts, provided you know your women! As last minute suggestions for the harried females and as timely tips for the puzzled male shoppers, some of the practically irresistible new scents are now listed.

A new success, a gardenia called Byzance, nearer to the real flower fragrance than anything yet mixed! Lelong's new decorative bottle and perfume Mon Image, covered with a mirrored box that is the last word in modernism . . . the scent stolen from spicy carnations. Arcadi, a delightful fragrance, fresh as springtime and held captive in a lovely new bottle held in a Grecian metal standard.

If you are hunting for romantic flower odors try a haunting new Matchabelli mixture, Duchess of York, and recall lilac bushes loaded with pale purple blooms under a spring moon. An English perfumer sends typically old fashioned charmers, such as rose, and a very good violet that seems to last forever; also a rose geranium, heliotrope, and others.

And as a nice little bow to a celebrity . . . there is a new perfume called Mae West, bottled in a clever box with all the good witticism of the lady printed thereon . . . and even skeptics will admit the scent isn't the stuff it might be.

For the gentlemen who have been known to steal the bottled goods from a feminine dressing table, there are some exceptionally masculine perfumes and fragrant refreshing bath oil. Swiss pine ought to please. Lelong's cologne in the tall, good looking bottle of crackled glass and some lavender lotion that comes from Merrie England are others.

Another very new arrival is a compact box made of celestial blue satin . . . it holds a good supply of face powder, in the upper tray is the dry rouge, paste rouge and eye shadow . . . all priced well below five dollars and a darn good find for the last minute shopper.

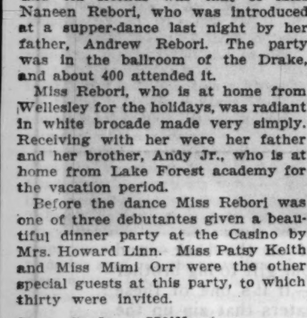
Diamonds Cast Pastel Shadows for This Quilt



Diamonds and Shadows.

BY NANCY CABOT.

This interesting design, while made in blocks, gives the appearance of being made with strips, as the pattern forms a continuous design down the length of the quilt. The diamonds should be in a plain color, the shadows either in delicate prints or a plain color of lighter shade than the diamonds.

For a quilt pattern in this design send 5 cents in coin or stamps to Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, printing your name and address clearly. Or call at the Chicago Tribune Public Service office, One South Dearborn.

Music Sheets Delayed; Stock Alters Program

But Old Number Pleases Holiday Audience.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Conductor Frederick Stock was evidently more willing to extend patrons of the Chicago Symphony orchestra a pre-Christmas greeting in the form of a new piece of music than those who had the music most in interest. He had announced that the orchestra would play a set of dances from Paul Hindemith's "Nusch-Nuschi," which would seem to be a Burmese marionette play of a satirical and recondite kind, but last night there was a slip in the program saying the orchestral parts had not arrived, and consequently the orchestra would play the prelude to Humperdinck's "Hansel and Grete."

This is considerably older music, but after all Hindemith would have had to show considerable ability to write better Christmas music, or better music of any kind. It was followed by the eighth of Beethoven's symphonies, Beethoven in his most light hearted mood, but a mood which unfortunately has set up the weightiest sort of comment as to whether Beethoven was or was not too great a composer to write program music, whether or not he was facetious at this point, and if not, what did he mean, anyway? It seldom seems to occur to these writers that it might be a good plan to take the music for its own sake.

After the intermission came Scriabin's fine "Le Poème de l'Extase," and at the end there was some more light hearted music, the ballet and wedding march from Rubinstein's "Feramors."

Several changes have already appeared in the first week's announcements of the Chicago Grand Opera company. The first will take place on the opening night. Joseph Royer, first billed to sing Scarpia to Maria Jeritza's Tosca, will be unable to appear, and his place will be filled by the veteran baritone, Pasquale Amato.

On the second night Elisabeth Rethberg will appear as Cho-Cho-San in "Mme. Butterfly," together with Mario Chamlee and Claudio Frigerio. As this was the only available date that Mme. Rethberg could fill, Marion Claire's announced appearance in "La Traviata" will be deferred for a week.

Edna Kellogg, soprano, and niece of Mrs. Ernest R. Graham of Chicago and of Anna Fitziu, once a leading soprano of the old Chicago Opera company, has been engaged by the new organization to appear at a date not yet announced.

Christmas carols will be sung by children from the Civic Music Choruses at the Cordon club this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. They are announced to appear tomorrow at Lyon & Healy's at 12:30 o'clock, at the Art institute at 1:30 o'clock, and in the lounge of the Stevens hotel at 2:30 o'clock. They will appear with the Sunday Evening club at Orchestra hall Sunday evening. The Chicago Symphonic choir, directed by Walter Aschenbrenner, will sing at Lyon & Healy's tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Carl D. Kinsey has resigned as president of the Chicago Musical college, and Rudolph Ganz, musical director of the college under Mr. Kinsey, will succeed him in office. Mr. Kinsey has no immediate business plans for the future, but will spend the winter months with Mrs. Kinsey in California.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., Dec. 21.—[Special.]—Mrs. Curtis B. Dall, daughter of the President, was the guest for whom Mrs. Arthur Francis Mullen entertained at a tea and reception this afternoon in her Georgetown home. Mrs. Dern, wife of the secretary of war; Mrs. Cummings, wife of the attorney general; and Mrs. Roper, wife of the secretary of commerce, alternated at the tea table.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Eskridge Saltzman, the latter formerly Miss Gertrude Lamont of Chicago, daughter of the former secretary of commerce, are guests over the week end and Christmas day, of Mr. Saltzman's parents, Gen. and Mrs. Charles McK. Saltzman.

Thousand Children Will Attend Party.

When Santa Claus slides down the chimney of the Hotel Sherman this evening right into the midst of 1,000 needy Chicago children, he's going to have a rollicking group of society girls for his helpful gnomes. The occasion is the annual children's Christmas benefit for the social service institutions of the Episcopal church under the sponsorship of the Church Club of Chicago.

After an honest to goodness Christmas dinner the young guests are to be entertained with specialty acts and a sleigh full of gifts. Bishop George Craig Stewart will have a message and then all will join in singing Christmas carols.

Mrs. John G. McDonald called yesterday to tell us of the Christmas luncheon and program this noon at the McCormick memorial of the Y. W. C. A. After luncheon Miss Juliet Barker is to read Christmas poetry. The party is one feature of the educational extension work of the Y. W. C. A.

This evening the members of the Chi Psi fraternity are to hold their annual ball at the Saddle and Cycle club with Sidney Strotz, Henry Paulman Jr., Thomas J. Boodell, and Fred Borrowdale as masters of ceremonies. Among those who will attend the party with groups of their friends are the Huntington Henrys, the Harold Strotzes, Lawrence M. Viles, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Hagey, and Mr. and Mrs. James Garard.

Poise Acquired by Bolstering Up One's Sense of Self-Respect

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Poise is what Eleanor asks for. It's what she says she has a great deal of use for and would like to know where to get it.

You can't ask for a better gift or greater charm, Eleanor. It would be wise to ask the good fairy for this gift in preference to many another. It's such an asset in itself and it has the trick of magnifying every other gift and soft-pedaling any liability or liabilities. As for example, one of our acquaintance who has few assets that would be found usable in the movies, say—yet she has that blessed gift of poise; therefore, is spoken of always as a woman of infinite charm.

Parents can endow youngsters, with it along with tooth brushing, hair brushing and other good habits. The kind of parents who laugh at a growing girl's awakardness, however, do not qualify as worthy directors of poise. Instead of criticizing and laughing, the child would be better off were she praised constantly for what she does well. For poise is not present where an inferiority feeling gains ground.

Why girls, especially young girls, should suffer inferiority over their looks today is something I don't understand. They have all the advantages in self-grooming within their reach. They don't have to fit any set standard of beauty. They can be blonde or brunette or redhead or mouse-colored and with makeup and dress colors and the fine groomed points practiced they have as good a chance as any.

They don't even have to be good looking. They may be clever, or amusing, or just nice, and get their following. They can have large feet and no one minds; large hands, turned up noses, so long as they look clean and wholesome and smart.

So, if a girl lacks poise because she thinks the gods were agin her in her creating she's just plain silly. She can learn to walk well, to dance well, to talk well if she wants to. Everything is possible to today's young woman, so a feeling of inferiority is a vice of her own making and encouraging. Beauty isn't what it used to be, I repeat. You don't have to have a large equipment—just enough to get by will do if you have brains enough to use that little cleverly.

I don't know any other way you can get or have poise than by bolstering up your own self-respect and estimating yourself better.

Parental Veto of Boy Friend May Be Pride

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"If I don't leave home and live by myself, I will never have a mind of my own. All of my life my mother has practically made up my mind or had a great influence on it."

There's a man in the case, of course. Mother doesn't think the boy friend good enough. That's her only reason for objecting. By "good enough" mamma means not rich enough, not socially good enough. The boy and girl were raised in the same environment, have similar educational training and practice the same faith.

The girl is 22, an age at which one expects a certain amount of making up her own mind. An age, too, at which certain girls feel resentment toward any kind of advice or help a parent may offer. The kind of girl who talks about leaving home and living by herself at 22 presents a mother-daughter problem in which our sympathy leans toward the parent more than to toward the girl.

It would seem that by 22 a girl might have learned there are other ways of coping with personal problems than running away from home. A modern young woman of 22 might be adult minded enough herself to realize it's her parent's maternal pride and joy in her looks and gifts which are responsible for the high appraisal she sets upon her daughter. Realizing this, she might be a bit more indulgent toward the attitude. She could laugh about it, tease mother for her exaggerated opinion of her girl, thank her for the compliment but admit it is a gross exaggeration.

After all, mothers could stand a bit of coddling over this common hallucination they have about their girls. They've spent some twenty odd years fashioning this product of theirs.

Let Child Enjoy His Christmas Gifts in Peace

Don't Force Him to "O" and "Ah" Ecstatically.

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

Every once in a while I feel sure that some of the things that appear in this column haven't any meaning at all for some parents. If you're a casual sort of person, or perhaps if you're not intensely interested in your children, or if—another perhaps—your children are the easy going, happy-go-lucky kind you probably think as you read certain articles, "Oh, I don't believe children are like that," or "That is much ado about nothing." All of which is a preface to today's article:

Try to manage so that your small children receive their Christmas presents in peace. To do this you'll have to understand your little boys and girls.

First of all, don't be disappointed if they don't burst into expressions of delight over each present. Sometimes their deepest pleasure in unexpressed.

Next, don't expect them to immediately say "thank you's" to all the people present who have given them something. Even if they've been trained to do so, their excitement is pretty sure to make them forget their conventional manners. "Why Molly! You haven't said 'thank you' to Aunt Jane or Uncle John," is a reproach that should be omitted on Christmas day.

Let them look at each thing in a leisurely way. If you pile up presents all wrapped under the tree, or if you bring them out one at time, don't hurry the little boy or girl through the unwrapping, and the moment of surprise, and the drinking in of the delightful details of the plaything. Also don't steal all this thunder by a flood of oh's and ah's and extravagant admiration of the beauty of the baby doll or the furry animal or the fire engine.

And last of all, don't think Christmas has been a failure because at four o'clock you came upon small Bobby or Barbara absorbedly climbing in and out of one of the big corrugated boxes the toys were packed in, or blissfully hammering nails into an old board. Don't say in a crestfallen way, "why Bobby, don't you like all your lovely presents?" and don't feel it either. Lots of new things can't be enjoyed all at once by little children and frequently they'll do some old familiar thing, or else take just one present and play with it all Christmas day.

Sporty Ski Suit Chez Dilkushka Assumes Flung Back Line of Sophisticated Cape

BY BETTINA REDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—The flung back movement, which is important in Paris city styles, is now appearing in active ski clothes, put there by Dilkusha [Princess de Rohan]. She designed the model shown, with a scarf that is also a hood, made of yellow and brown checkered woolen. When worn as shown on the smaller figure this hood scarf presents the same flung back line you see done in silver fox and other fur on coats and capes worn in Paris. It is a pointed hood with long ties.

The ski suit is made of heavy brown wool and the jacket fastens up to the neck at the left side of the front, held at the waistline by a checkered leather belt. The gloves and socks are yellow with brown dots.

The plus four type of ski trousers finish the suit and there is a short knitted jacket of beige wool inside the suit jacket. It buttons up the front. Inside is a plain shirt made of the same wool as the hooded scarf, with a standing buttoned collar and patch pockets.

The hood for skiing is a detail that has taken the fancy of a number of elegant women bound at this time for the Austrian Tyrol or St. Moritz.

MINUTE MYSTERY

By H. A. RIPLEY

[Copyright: 1933: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Dr. Fordney is professor of criminology at a famous university. His advice is often sought by the police of many cities when confronted with particularly baffling cases. This problem, which has ONLY ONE POSSIBLE SOLUTION, has been taken from his case-book covering hundreds of criminal investigations.

CASE NO. 99.

Dr. Chester's report in part confirmed Henry Hobb's story. It stated that while the face and body of Irma Hobb bore several cuts and bruises that the cause of death was a downward blow on her temple, where she had apparently hit herself on the corner of a mahogany chest and that death had probably resulted in an hour afterwards. He could not definitely say there was no poison in the body until after the autopsy.

Hobb and his wife lived in a small house in an isolated part of the country and, so far as any one knew, enjoyed that greatest of blessings, marital felicity.

One afternoon late in November Hobb rushed to the police station of the small adjacent town and said his wife was dead. He told the officers that on returning home he had found Mrs. Hobb, scratched and bruised, lying in a daze on the davenport. He had rushed upstairs to the bathroom for some aromatic spirits of ammonia, hoping thus to arouse her. On returning to the first floor he found her reeling around and before he could catch her she fell forward, striking her temple on the low chest which stood in the hallway. Having no telephone, he tried to revive her with such medicines as were at hand. Failing to do so and finally realizing she was dead, he had come for the police.

After examining Mrs. Hobb's nails, Prof. Fordney remarked: "Dr. Chester, you'll have to revise your report, Hobb will be held!"

WHY?

Perhaps you have a story or problem you would like to submit to Prof. Fordney. If so, send it to him care of this paper. He will be delighted to receive it.
